Another Day to Live.
Who Shaves Her Head?
Rome Stands Firm.
A Ford-Edison Choice.

— By ARTHUR BRISBANE —

(Copyright, 1928.)

AT THE last moment there was hope that Mrs. Ruth Snyder would have one more day to live just outside the little door that leads to the electric chair. That was not much of a favor, considering what goes on in a mind waiting to be killed. This morning you will know just what happened.

THERE is little difference between one day more of life, and an indefinite number of days, since we must all go through the door that leads out of the world.

It is the uncertainty as to date that makes death's certainty bearable. Everyone of us is condemned, as certainly as Mrs. Snyder. But we think little about it because no day is set.

ONE philosophical soul, sitting in California sunshine on the hill where this is written, says "Ask them what they would do, if, like Ruth they knew they had only one day more."

The answer is that "they"—the average—would do nothing except worry, and pity themselves.

MUCH could be made of a last day, if you had the philosophy of old Socrates, setting a fine example, paying his debts, "we owe a cock to Esculaius," refusing a chance to live that he might show respect for law. Such a death is worth as much as any life, especially if you have a pupil like Plato to write about it.

A MORE interesting question is this: How can any human being be hired to get that woman ready for her killing, and then kill her?

The crown of her head must be shaved, to let the deadly, wet electrode press tight to the scalp. What man or woman is found willing to shave the head of the screaming, struggling woman?

Who, for pay, consents to cut away the woman's dress, baring the calf of the leg for the other electrode? The horrible current is sent into the brain, down through heart and spine, then out, at the leg, below the knee.

WHAT horrible prostitution of science to use it for such a shameful killing, in the name of civilization! What are the mental operations of the electrician, by whom the switch is thrown?

No wonder the Governor of New York regrets that he could find no reason, consistent with his oath of office, for letting the miserable woman live on, in life imprisonment.

OTHER religions have risen and fallen, shifted and changed. Luther's name, and Calvin's, once great powers in Protestantism, now represent only branches of the Protestant church.

But Rome, and the Pope, stand where they stood 1,000 years ago. Rome "stays put," admits no fundamental change. No possibility of improving what Rome declares to be the eternal truth. Protestant churches, some near to Rome, some far from her, arrange a "get-together-bury-our-differences-arrange-our-doctrines-on-a-compromise basis" conference, inviting the Pope and his church to join.

THE Pope's answer is "No. Return to Rome, or remain outside of the only true church. What was true 1900 years ago, is true today." If you want to endure, as Rome has endured, map out a program, stick to it, and above all, let no one change it for you.

Bigger Guard Asked

STEUBENVILLE, O., Jan. 13.—(AP.) — Approximately 250 men, in roving bands of from 20 to 30, attacked non-union miners on their way to work in the Rush Run mine of the Youghiogheny & Ohio Coal Company, eight miles south of here, this morning, assaulting six workers and driving off a score of others, Sheriff W. T. Allison, of Jefferson county, announced.

Sheriff Allison said he had been given information that an attack was to be made and was near the scene with four deputies, but was unable to pursue any of the men as they dispersed into small bands. He declared the situation was "serious." Lieut. Col. Don Caldwell, of the Ohio National Guard, who is on the scene, appealed to county commissioners for more sheriff's deputies.

The mine, which has been employing 100 men, was forced to

STARS TO GIVE BENEFIT SHOW FOR MINERS

Convinced that prompt action must be taken and generous assistance given if the suffering now prevalent among women and children in the mining camps of Allegheny county is not to have tragic consequences, the theater managers of Pittsburgh have banded together to give a benefit entertainment for the unfortunate ones at the Davis at midnight next Thursday.

"A ten dollar show for a dollar, and the dollar to be devoted to philanthropy!", is the slogan with which the people are to be invited to patronize the entertainment.

Seldom if ever has the theater-going public of Pittsburgh been offered such a bargain. Acts from 13 theaters, including the high-priced "legitimate" stage as well as the vaudeville, movie and burlesque houses, will be presented in generous measure. The cleverest performers, the funniest comics, the most attractive dancers, the sweetest singers in the Pittsburgh theaters next week are going to join

Fliers Stay Up Despite Break

MITCHELL FIELD, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Just before complete darkness settled over the airdromes here last night the Bellanca monoplane in which Clarence D. Chamberlain and Roger Q. Williams are trying for a new world duration record, swooped low over the field and Williams tossed an envelope almost directly into the hands of waiting reporters.

The plane then zoomed back into the clouding sky with a healthy roar that indicated lots of "pep" and staying power.

The general text of the note was that "the exhaust heater control broke off from vibration and it looks like a cold ride," but that "there is no doubt we'll break the record if no trouble develops." This was at the time when dark was closing in, about 5:40 p. m., after the plane had been up almost seven hours.

The plane took off at 10:11:53 a. m. yesterday.

At 10:30 this morning Chamberlin dropped a note to A. R. Martine, owner of the plane, notifying him of mechanical difficulties that may prove serious. The flier also reported that his food had been spoiled and asked for advice regarding the next move.

The present world record is held by a Junkers plane. It was set last August 3, over Dessau, Germany, by Edzard and Ristics. They kept the Junkers aloft, without refueling, for 52 hours, 22 minutes and 31 seconds.

End Breaks Ruth; Judd Resigned

By Universal Service.

SING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Aware that death was inevitable in a few hours, Judd Gray and Ruth Snyder last night faced their doom in strikingly opposed demeanors.

Gray took it resignedly. Mrs. Snyder took it hard. Gray observed he had expected failure to attend the final moves of counsel. Mrs. Snyder cried and sobbed she was too young and too fond of life to die.

They ordered and had their last meals on earth at 6 o'clock.

GRAY EATS LAVISHLY

Gray ate a lavish meal, as he had at noon. Mrs. Snyder gulped a drink. She could not eat.

Gray spent his last hours with the Bible. He called for Dr. Anthony Peterson, Protestant chaplain. He named the psalm he wanted repeated as he walked to the death chamber.

Shortly after 6 Gray was dressed in the cotton black suit of the death hour, slit at the right leg for an electrode.

"I have sinned and am ready to pay the penalty," he said. "Perhaps my life will serve as an example to others."

He said nothing more. He has been a silent figure for days, nerv-

OLGA PAWLISKIK

Although Olga Pawliskik, 17, of Fair Oaks, near Ambridge, has confessed to killing Nick Anderson, 25, in the kitchen of her home, police doubt her story. They believe the little blonde Russian with the Mona Lisa face is shielding Mike Poppowich, her sweetheart. The coroner's inquest held both for the grand jury.

RUTH AND JUDD MEET END SHAKY BUT GAME

SING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 13.—They led Ruth Brown Snyder from her steel cage last night. Then the powerful guards thrust her into the obscene, sprawling oak arms of the ugly electric chair.

That was only about 12 hours ago. The memory of the crazed woman in her last agony as she struggled against the unholy embrace of the chair is yet too harrowing to permit of calm portrayal of the law's ghastly ritual. Ruth was the first to die.

The formal destruction of the killers of poor, stolid, unemotional Albert Snyder in his rummed-up sleep the night of March 20, 1927, was hardly less revolting than the crime itself. Both victims of the chair met their death tremblingly but brave.

Each was killed by a sustained, long-drawn current that rose and fell at the discretion of the hawk-eyed state executioner, Robert Elliott. In Ruth's case he administered three distinct increases of current. For Judd, Elliott had two climactical electric increases.

Judd Shuns Glasses

Ruth entered the death chamber at 11:05 o'clock. She was declared dead at 11:09.5. Less than three minutes after her limp body was freed from the chair Gray entered not wearing his glasses and rolling his not unhandsome eyes rapidly from right to left and then upward. The current was applied to Gray at 11:14 o'clock. He was pronounced dead by Dr. C. Sweet, chief prison physician, at 11:16.

Brief as was the time for the state to slay Ruth and Judd, it seems in retrospect to have been a long, haunting blur of bulging, horror-glazed eyes, saffron faces, fear-blanched, that became twisted masks, purpling underlips and hands as pale as church wax, clenching convulsively in the last paroxysms.

And, as these woeful wrecks passed from life, the shadows of attendants, greatly magnified, seemed to move in fantastic array along the walls, the silhouettes nodding and prancing in a sepulchral minuet.

"I Forgive You," Last Words Ruth, Judd Exchange

By International News Service.

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Ruth Brown Snyder and Henry Judd Gray died forgiving each other.

A short time before they went to the electric chair which joined them in eternity, each sent the other a note. What the exact words were none may know. But their minds had worked independently and both had sent the notes spontaneously.

"I am very glad," said Gray. "I had hoped she would forgive me. I hope God will forgive her sin—forgive both of us."

Mrs. Snyder, too, seemed happy over this last minute gesture.

"It is good to be at peace with all," she declared. "I feel kindly toward Judd Gray, and I hope he doesn't take his death hard. I said some unkind things about him, but it was because I blamed him for putting me in the position I am now in. We sinned together, and we are going, God knows where."

Mother Fights Step-Mother For Child

MERCER, Pa., Jan. 13.—Mother is pitted against step-mother in a legal battle for custody of Betty Anderson, 10, of Farrell.

Lovica Stoner, mother of Betty, has instituted habeas corpus proceedings to gain possession of the child from Mrs. Gladys Anderson, who married William Anderson, father of the girl, after the Stoner woman divorced him.

Bury Judd Today In Orange Under Police Guard

EAST ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 13.—(INS.)—Judd Gray, the "high life" corset salesman—all that remains of him—arrived here today from Sing Sing Prison for burial. The hearse that took the body from the prison shortly after Gray and Ruth Snyder were executed last night sped into town followed by a string of some dozen cars carrying newspaper reporters. Behind them, a half hundred cars filled with the morbidly curious, made up the funeral cortege.

Gray will be buried later today in Rosedale Cemetery, Orange. The services will be of the simplest, and conducted under police guard to prevent disorder.

Stage Set For Death In Silence

By GENE FOWLER.

SING SING PRISON, OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 13.—Here is a chronological summation of the detail as scribbled in the death house hour last night. It is a reporter's diary of the night, beginning with the gathering of the 24 witnesses in the oak-paneled office of Warden Lawes.

It is a quarter of 11 o'clock. Death is almost ready to present his ghoulish midnight show inside the ugly old stone walls of Sing Sing Prison. The two tragic actors in this weird piece are dressed for their parts. Their faltering hope, spurred earlier inthe day by Supreme Justice Aaron Levy's staying order, now is gone. Now a guard confides:

"THEY ARE PRAYING IN THEIR CELLS. FATHER M'CAFFREY IS WITH RUTH. THE REV. ANTHONY PETERSON IS WITH JUDD. JUDD IS CALM. RUTH—WELL, WE DON'T KNOW. SHE ACTS KIND OF BATTY."

The last visits have been paid. The final meal served. Small patches on the crowns of the victims' skulls have

'Go Straight,' Warning Of Ruth and Judd

RUTH SNYDER—"I am very, very sorry I have sinned, but I am paying dearly for it. I only hope that my life that I am giving up now will serve as a lesson to the rest of the world. If only the world will benefit by it, I am satisfied."

"We sinned together, and I guess we'll go—God knows where."

"If I were to live over again, I would want to be what I want my child to be—a good girl and really making the fear of God that I have learned lately lead me to a straight life."

JUDD GRAY—"I don't yet understand why I did it. I have made my peace with God."

"My only regret is the sorrow and the disgrace I have brought upon my wife, my mother, my daughter and my folks."

"Let my death be a warning to other men who are steering a wrong course in life."

Put Velma In Chair's Shadow

PAINESVILLE, O., Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Mrs. Velma West, 21-year-old hammer-slayer of her husband, Thomas Edward West, was placed in the shadow of the electric chair late yesterday when the Lake county grand jury indicted her on a charge of first-degree murder.

The widow of the Perry (O.) nurseryman was informed of the degree of the charge against her by her attorneys, Richard Bostwick and Francis W. Poulson, who visited her in her cell in the Lake county jail. She expressed surprise but made no other comment. Prosecutor Seth Paulin indicated he will demand the extreme penalty for Mrs. West when she is brought to trial.

She probably will be arraigned Saturday before Common Pleas Judge Arlington G. Reynolds.

The grand jury since last Monday had listened to the testimony of a long list of witnesses, including many friends who knew Mrs. West as a high school student in Cleveland and who frequently attended parties with her in her home city.

The jury went into her life history, hearing the story of her courtship by West, who met her at a party in Cleveland, and their marriage scarcely more than a year ago.

close. It opened about two weeks ago.

With numerous large mines in this district planning to re-open soon on a nonunion basis, Sheriff Allison said he feared "serious trouble" unless county commissioners authorized employment of additional deputies.

Several months ago a number of special deputies were dropped on account of lack of county funds. Lieut. Col. Caldwell also characterized the situation as "serious."

The attackers patroled all roads this morning, Sheriff Allison said. A number of workers who escaped from the attackers were stoned, he reported.

MRS. SNYDER RAVES AS JUDD PRAYS

upper electrode, was pressed to the skulls of Judd and Ruth, one after the other, in a manner suggesting a sordid coronation of the king and queen of horror.

A hissing noise emanating from the bodies of the current-paralyzed victims rose like a hideous hymn by a serpent choir. No regal incense for these wretched beings—but from the skull of each in turn there coiled upward thin, spiral wisps of pale smoke where their scalps were seared by the killing flame.

As Ruth entered the room, she responded to the prayer for the dying given her by the Rev. Father John T. McCaffrey.

Ruth's voice, bereft of the hysterical scream that sometimes has risen from her throat in the condemned cell, now was high-pitched but soft in tone. It sometimes was the voice of a little girl—such a one as might be seen and heard during the Times Square rush hour when lost from her parents and among big, strange men.

In response to the prayer of the priest, who wore his black cassock and stood sadly over her, Ruth muttered parts of the response, the last one being:

"Father, forgive them, for they know what they do."

The leather helmet was pressed to her blonde hair, a patch of which had been clipped to make place for the electrode. Two matrons, who had walked, one on either side of the woman, departed sadly from the room before Elliott shot the hot blast into her once white lovely body.

"Have Mercy"

The matrons and principal keeper, John Sheahy, had stood before the pitiful woman to shield as much as possible her helpless form from the gaze of witnesses. Ruth wore a brown smock of the sort stenographers and women clerks use in their office work. It had white imitation pearl buttons. She had on a short, black cotton skirt, black cotton stockings, the right one of which was rolled down to her ankle. On her feet were brown felt slippers. She wore blue bloomers.

"Jesus have mercy?" came the pitiful cry. Ruth's blue eyes were red with much weeping. Her face was strangely old. The blonde, bobbed hair, hanging in stringy bunches over her furrowed brow, seemed almost white with years of toil and suffering as the six dazzling, high-powered lights illuminated every bit of Ruth's agonized lineaments.

Ruth's form seemed more slender than usual as she dragged her feet and groped with her hands.

"Father, forgive—" The trailing, fading voice was interrupted. The holy litany was snapped short. No priestly ministrations could save her body now. Ruth's felt slippered feet were at the great abyss. Her blanched face, only the lower part of which one could see, was chalky.

She who had pleaded earlier in the day for life—just 24 hours more of it—seemed to have lived a thousand years and a thousand torments in the hellish prelude. Tightly corseted by the black leather bands, Ruth was flabby and futile as the blast struck her. It swept into her veins with an insidious buzz. Her body went forward as far as the restraining thongs would permit.

The tired form was taut. The body that once throbbed with the joy of her sordid revels, steeped in booze, lust and license, became rigid and flushed as the current struck. Slowly, after a half-minute of the death dealing current, the exposed arms, right leg, throat and jaws bleached out again.

Executioner Elliott in his alcove gazed as dourly as a gargoyle at the iron widow who now had turned to putty. Then he shut off the current. Dr. Sweet stepped forward, he adjusted the stethoscope exploring for any chance heart beat. Ruth's right hand had been clenched tightly. The left hand, which had clasped the crucifix as she was buckled fast to the chair, was not clenched. The back of that hand rested flush against the chair. The forefinger and thumb were placed together, in the position of one who is holding a pinch of snuff. As the current was opened, the hand slowly turned over in the wrist strap, the forefinger and thumb, which had been pointing upward, now were turned down.

A Broken Butterfly

All this time there had been a hissing, whirring monotone. That was the only sound in the white-walled death chamber except the little rattle in the silvered steam-pipes.

Two attendants hastily donned white internes' coats. A porcelain topped wheeled stretcher, virtually a movable operating table—which hitherto had been behind the chair, was brought to Ruth's feet. And now the small audience was nauseated by the repellant work the chair had done.

One attendant screened Ruth's legs with a towel. As a guard removed the electrode, it proved to have been a ghastly garter, one that scalded, branded and bit deeply.

Two men hoisted her. Her arms hung limply.

No longer was Ruth trussed in those oily black straps. One of those binders had seemed to press her bosom cruelly where once a baby daughter had nestled and found life. Another belt had imprisoned her waist.

Ruth was a broken butterfly in a spider web.

In looking back—back to the death of Ruth—the adjusting of the helmet—imagine a football helmet of regulation brand on a woman's head as an instrument of death—I say the adjustment of that helmet was a striking symbol of Ruth's futile search for worldly joys through sin.

Judd's Wife

MRS. ISABEL GRAY

And Then Judd

It spelled all that she had dared, suffered and paid in leaving her doll's house in staid home loving Queens Village. That helmet was death's sordid millinery. No fluffy ribbons or bows or gaily-hued feathers so dear to the fun-loving Ruth.

Just a snaky wire at the top of this hateful hat, a wire that coiled beside her and was ready to dart into the brain with searing fangs. They wheeled her out to the autopsy room. There were three minutes of mopping up, retesting of the machinery. Warden Lewis E. Lawes stood sadly aside. Father McCaffrey his head bowed, departed.

The chair, that moloch of civilization in this year of enlightenment, was yawning for another human sacrifice. Principal Keeper Sheahy left the room to summon the little corset salesman to his doom.

Judd Dies Game

"Blessed are the pure in heart" intoned the chaplain. Gray's white lips moved. A deaf person would have understood the words by the lip-reading system. But only a cackling scramble of sound got past Gray's rather boyish mouth. It seemed that Gray came into the death house supported by a religious ecstasy.

His chaplain was wearing his gown as a doctor of divinity. He is a large, finely set up man with gray hair and a large kindly face. Gray sought the eyes of his spiritual adviser both when he walked into the chamber and before his eyes were masked. In walking, Gray moved with leaden feet. At times he seemed to be treading on thorns and the two lines between his eyes and at the top of his nose were black streaks in his ashen face. That face seemed to be fed by lukewarm water instead of blood.

Brisk and facile fingers of veteran guards, whose powerful hands displayed an astounding cunning, worked at Gray's straps. The big hands manipulated the buckles and the spidery accoutrements of death with the ease of a battery of Paderewski's ensnaring the notes of a rhapsody.

Gray had entered the room at 11:08 o'clock. At first he walked stiffly, as though his knees were locked together. His steps sometimes were like those of a person trying to climb a steep hill. His chin, which had a deep cleft in it, was thrust forward and his nostrils were slightly distended. There was evidence of a terrible inner strain, but there was not one whit of cowardice manifest in the march of the little corset salesman.

His jaws were as yellowish white as saffron and his lately-shaved beard still showed enough to lend shadows to his sunken jowls, but there was no saffron and no yellow in his backbone, no matter what his crime was or how brutal he may have been when he held a sash-weight over Albert Snyder.

Ruth Dies First

Everyone had expected Judd to die first. But, at the final hour, Warden Lawes moved Ruth to a last-minute cell only 20 paces from the chair chamber. Judd was shunted to the east wing and had to walk 160 feet.

Judd Gray met his death like a man. It is true he seemed horribly shaken. It is a fact that he was so moved by the enormity of the price he must pay that his voice could not be heard above a guttural, jumbled monotone. His lips framed the words, but the words died in his throat. It was the voice of a man being turned into mummy-like catalepsy.

Judd, his roving eyes apparently seeing naught before him, looked so shabby in the full, white light and against the back-ground of severely tailored men and uniformed guards. Yet, there was in his bearing a sense of dignity incompatible with criminality and disgraceful death. Judd came of good people and his breeding now told.

Judd Impressive

Yes, his dignity as he tried to repeat after the Protestant chaplain, the Rev. Anthony Peterson, the phrases from the Sermon on the Mount, was impressive. One forgot his cheap, frowsy gray trousers and the grotesque, flapping right pants leg that had been split at the inner seam to receive the electrode. He wore figured woolen socks of a mauve shade. The right one was rolled down over the felt brown slipper. His knitted long underwear of light buff color had the right leg rolled high above the knee. Gray's leg was well developed and evidenced his athletic days of tennis and quarterback on his school football eleven. Now he wore a football helmet, too, just the sort he used to sport when directing the attack of his team.

The doctors, Sweet and John Kearney, watched in a detached way as the well-trained prison attendants proceeded to kill Judd in the name of the state. Elliott sent the short coppered lever home. Judd, who had been sort of crumbled beneath his leather manacles, now shot forward and remained erect.

Judd In Chair

At the first electric torrent, Judd's throat and jaws were swollen. The chords stood out. The skin was gorged with blood and was the color of a turkey gobbler's wattles. Slowly this crimson tide subsided and left his face paler. The electricity was put on just as the chaplain got this far with his comforting words:

"For God so loved the world." Judd was not conscious presumably, to hear the rest of the minister's "that He gave His only begotten Son."

Gray's white shirt was open. When Elliott withdrew the lever of the switch, Dr. Sweet walked forward to search the chest of the night's second victim for heart action. He found none. He said:

"I pronounce this man dead."

The chair with its now lifeless burden still held the eyes of many with a bewildering fascination. There were not few, however, who covered their eyes.

The men in white coats made their second trip with the wheeled stretcher. Judd did not know that he had been preceded in death by Ruth. They had not seen each other or exchanged notes since they first entered the death house eight months ago. Nor did the former lovers meet tonight—in life.

Reunited in Death

Still these victims who were known as No. 79892 (Ruth Snyder) and No. 79891 (Judd Gray) on the prison rolls, are again together in death. For their bodies shrouded in white sheets are in the prison morgue, a small room not 50 feet from the chair. This, then, was the end of the road, the close of their two years of stolen love.

Their bodies are dissected as the first hour of the new day comes hazily over town, prison and broad, half frozen river. Their skulls are opened by medical men, as is the stern letter of the law, and their brains are plucked therefrom by rubber gloved hands and are deftly turned this way and that for inspection beneath the bright prison lights.

It was an unhallowed spectacle, this reduction of a full-blooded woman of 33 years to a limp cadaver. It was fearful to see a man die in the chair. The 24 invited guests file out of the death house. Warden Lawes' secretary, Clem J. Ferly, signs the death certificates.

Then the calm realization that the law had been obeyed and society avenged and that the chair remains to jerk and rip and tear and burn those who slay. Then to bed for nightmares to distort your scrambled dreams.

ing himself for the ordeal in the solace of the Bible.

Gray was taken the rounds of the death house. He said goodbye to the 11 other condemned men. It was the first time he ever had seen any of them. He will never see them again.

Mrs. Snyder plunged on her cot and rocked with sobs. She had just spent the last minutes of a visit with her mother and sister.

Her last words were expressions of concern for Lorraine, her 10-year-old daughter.

"For God's sake," she cried, "look after my baby, look after my baby, look after my baby."

Gray was moved forward to a cell within 30 seconds' walk of the death chamber. Mrs. Snyder was kept in her cell in the women's wing, twice as far away.

Warden Lawes was asked: "How does Gray act?"

He replied: "He feels and looks better than I do. This has been the most nervous day I ever had."

"How is Mrs. Snyder?"

"She is as well as can be expected."

Lawes was plainly relieved that action at last had come from the courts. He had been insistent all day long that Justice Levy's stay would not survive the test of court debate, and although he held up preparations for a number of hours he went ahead later in the day with the steps necessary to get the death apparatus ready.

Late in the afternoon, Dr. Raymond Kieb arrived at the prison and instructed Lawes to proceed with the execution preparations.

Mrs. Joseph Brown, mother, and Andrew Brown, brother, were Mrs. Snyder's only and last visitors. They made their farewells late in the day, leaving the prison at 4 o'clock. Mrs. Margaret Gray, mother, and Mrs. Harold Logan, sister, were Gray's only visitors. His wife, Isabel, did not come.

Neither Lorraine Snyder nor Jane Gray, 10-year-old daughters of the condemned pair, came to the death house.

Throughout the afternoon the prison was on the qui vive, nervous and excited in anticipation of a possible last minute stratagem, each arriving automobile being scrutinized as though it contained attorneys with writs staying the executions.

So uncertain was the situation that at 6 o'clock Warden Lawes, though prepared to put them to death, had not moved Gray or Mrs. Snyder to the last minute death cells near the death chamber.

Shortly after 5 o'clock she received confirmation when she was asked what she desired for dinner. The invitation to select her own menu came a few minutes after Lawes received word from New York that the Levy order had been vacated and that the orginal program for the execution was to proceed.

He went to Gray's cell and asked him to name whatever last menu he desired and asked Gray how he felt.

"If it is God's will, it must be done," said Gray in a low tone.

Receipt of the official notification from New York sped the Warden's preparations. He made ready to transfer Gray to a forward cell and to have both prisoners barbered after dinner so that tufts of hair might be shorn to enable immediate contact of electrodes. He directed that they be dressed in death garb, Mrs. Snyder in a common dress, Gray in a black suit with the right trouser leg slit where an electrode was to be applied.

Lawes conferred with Kieb, and summoned Robert Elliott, state executioner. The prison electrician went into the death chamber and tested the apparatus. The electrician announced the apparatus was in readiness.

Attendants prepared the morgue for the autopsies following the executions.

Warden Lawes informed newspapermen that all persons would be sent out of the prison grounds at 8 o'clock except the 24 official witnesses, including 20 newspaper reporters.

He ordered guards stationed outside the walls at 6 o'clock to keep all persons out except those with death house invitations. All persons thereafter entering the ground were told they would not be permitted to leave until after the executions.

At 5:30 Lawes was informed from New York that Vincent Hart, secretary to the Attorney-General, was on the way to Ossining with court papers notifying him of the vacation of the Levy order.

Warden Lawes told off Matrons Lucy Many and Lillian Hickey to accompany Mrs. Snyder to the door of the death chamber, instructing them, however, that they were not to enter the death room.

Principal keeper John Sheehy was instructed to accompany Gray to the chair.

At 7 o'clock Lawes ordered all photographers from the prison grounds and directed the ejection of all visitors except those with official invitations to witness the executions. Relatives of the doomed had left.

Mrs. Josephine Brown and Andrew Brown, mother and brother of Mrs. Snyder, left her at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Margaret Gray and Mrs. Harold Logan, mother and sister of Gray, said farewell at 7 o'clock. Their departure was the signal for the warden's order barring all except official witnesses.

Executioner Elliott arrived at 6:50.

Gray received plain intimation at noon that death was at hand. He was informed he might have anything he desired for lunch. He ordered generously and received chicken soup, roast chicken, mashed potatoes, celery, stuffed olives, ice cream, cigars and good coffee.

Mrs. Snyder was not asked to designate her choice. Unlike Gray, her demeanor was such that attendants did not have the heart to impart the dread news that would be contained obviously in the urging that she order what she desired. True, in her farewell talk with her mother, Mrs. Snyder, according to the warden, laughed for a moment.

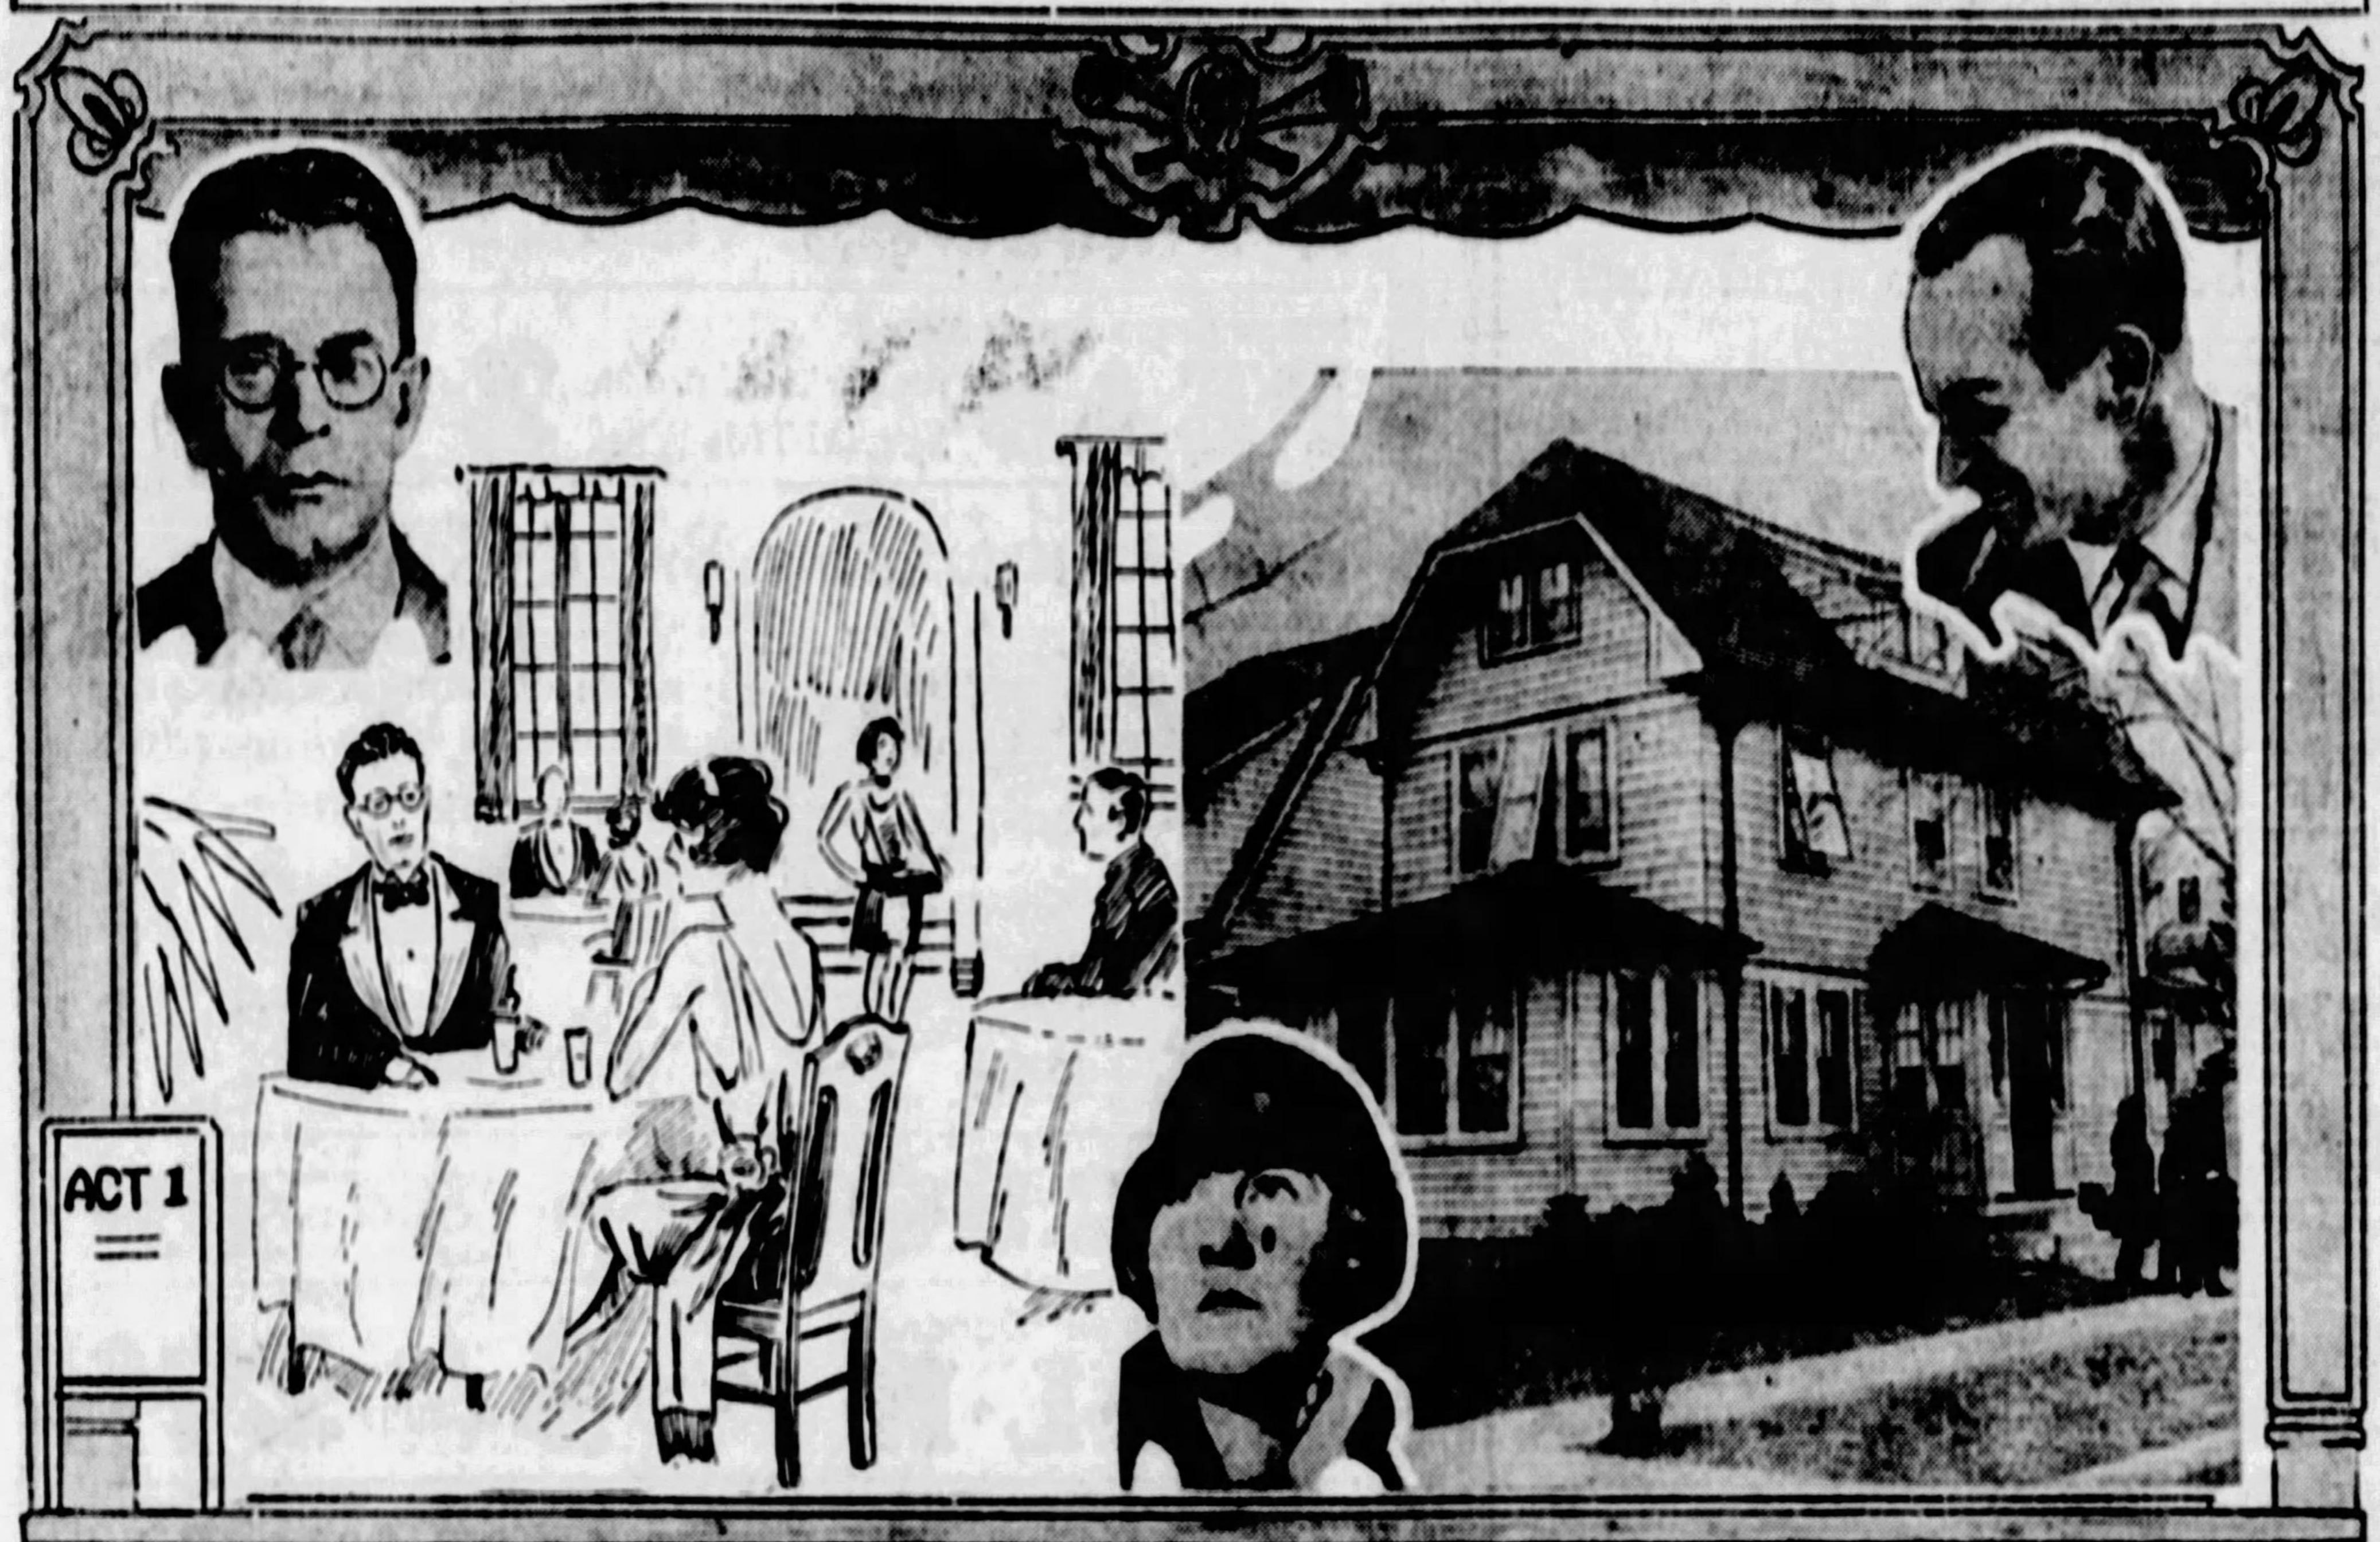
SNYDER-GRAY TRAGEDY -:- IN THREE ACTS



THE TRIANGLE ETERNAL

Ruth Snyder believed she saw happiness and that illusion, youth, after the bloom has fled, in Judd Gray, corset salesman. They met in a restaurant where the lights glowed bright—and late. They loved and conspired to kill Albert Snyder, New York Art editor, that they might live in luxury on his insurance principals.

Only One Mourner In Ruth's Cortege

TAXI PARADE FOLLOWS BROTHER TO VAULT

By International News Service

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—The body of Ruth Snyder arrived at Woodlawn Cemetery here today at the head of a pitiful funeral procession. The speeding hearse was followed by a car in which rode Andrew Brown, the dead woman's brother and the only member of her family present. There were no former friends.

The procession was made up of loudly honking taxis, whose drivers followed the hearse in morbid interest, and by a motorcycle escort of police. The body was placed in a vault pending funeral services, which will be held later.

Thus the woman who helped Judd Gray murder her husband as the result of a sordid love came to her final resting place.

Executioner Sick Man as He Goes From Prison

OSSINING, N. Y., Jan. 13.—(INS.)—Robert G. Elliott, the executioner who plunged the switch which sent Ruth Snyder and Henry Judd Gray into eternity, left the prison a sick man.

For several days he had been suffering from stomach trouble.

Chronology of Snyder and Gray Case

NEW YORK, Jan. 12.—(AP.)—Following is a calendar of the Snyder-Gray case:

March 20, 1927—Albert Snyder, 45-year-old art editor of magazine, Motor Boating, is found dead in his Queens Village home, his head beaten by a sashweight, a chloroform pad over mouth and nose and garroted with picture wire. Mrs. Snyder tells police her husband was killed by burglars.

March 21—Henry Judd Gray, 34-year-old corset salesman, is arrested in Syracuse, N. Y., after Mrs. Snyder makes "confession" in which she lays entire blame on him.

March 22 — Gray confesses that he and Mrs. Snyder jointly killed her husband, he striking the first blow and she finishing the murder. Says one motive was to get $95,000 insurance on Snyder's life for Mrs. Snyder.

March 23—Snyder is buried and his widow and Gray are indicted for his murder.

March 24—Mrs. Snyder and Gray plead not guilty and are remanded without bail for trial April 11.

April 5—Trial postponed until April 18 because original date fell in Holy Week.

April 17—Four alienists report that neither defendant is insane.

April 18—Trial opens before Justice Townsend Scudder in Long Island City.

April 29—Mrs. Snyder testifies in own defense, laying entire blame on Gray, whom she says she tried to deter.

May 3—Gray takes stand and confirms first confession. Says he was under domination of Mrs. Snyder and was merely her drink-sodden slave.

May 9—Case goes to jury and in less than two hours verdict of guilty is returned.

May 13—Mrs. Snyder and Gray sentenced to electrocution in week of June 20, but filing of appeals automatically stays execution.

May 17—Prisoners taken to Sing Sing prison.

July 21—Company that insured Snyder files suit for cancellation of policies on ground Mrs. Snyder took them out without husband's knowledge and with purpose of killing him.

November 22—Court of Appeals upholds death sentences and execution set for week of January 9.

January 5—Lawyers present plea for stay of execution to Gov. Smith at Albany.

January 10—Gov. Smith announces he finds no reason to halt progress of justice.

January 11—Stay of execution until 10 a. m., January 13, granted for Mrs. Snyder by Supreme Court Justice Levy in connection with insurance litigation.

January 12—Both electrocuted shortly after 11 p. m.

"--that you suffer death--by causing to pass through your bodies a current of electricity---until you are dead. May God in His infinite goodness have mercy on your souls."
JUSTICE SCUDDER

SENTENCED TO DIE

Together they heard the words that meant death in the electric chair. Then separately, like wolves snarling after the kill, they fought each for their own life. But to no avail.

'JUST BEFORE' DESCRIBED BY EYE WITNESS

been cropped to receive the brine-dipped electrodes. The electrode terminals are fashioned out of wire screening, faced with sponge.

JOHN SHANAHAN, PRISON ELECTRICIAN, HAS GIVEN THE MACHINERY OF DEATH A LAST TEST. HE SAYS: "IT IS READY."

The executioner, Robert Elliott—who says few people talk to him—refuses to comment. But he has been tinkering with the instrument board since 9:30 o'clock, and there's not a fleck of dust on the instrument plate. Elliott seems to personify death, the stage manager, standing in the wings to manipulate the sable curtain up, then down.

Twenty of the 24 men invited witnesses in the warden's office are reporters. Most of them have seen legal killings. Few, if any, have watched a woman annihilated by the state.

Such silence obtains that any fresh news from the death cell of Judd, 30 feet from the chair, or from Ruth, whose cell is nearly 200 feet from her death, rasps like a coarse file. It is now five minutes of 11. Time is crumbling swiftly.

"RUTH IS RAVING NOW. SHE'S CARRYING ON LIKE HELL."

Warden Lawes, militant foe of capital punishment, proceeds in business like manner to complete the hateful job according to the law's dictates. He tells the witnesses:

"It is time to go. Be as quiet as possible. Do not leave the chamber until you are told."

The 20 reporters and four visiting medical men, one of whom is an alienist, begin the march. They go through an exit leading to the prison yard. The night air is cold.

Sing Sing's architecture, commingling its melancholy yellows, dirty reds and aged grays with an inharmonious outline of homely towers, ungainly pylon gates and forbidding cell blocks, is at best a sordid sight. In the growing midnight, with death astride the breeze that creeps early from the dismal ice floes of the nearby Hudson, the prison seems to be an amphitheater for ghoulish sports.

There has been a faint and sickly mist that the wind now dissolves. That haze had begun to settle against the walls and sentry turrets and had seemed a winding sheet as it lapped the blunt outlines of the forbidding city of silent men.

One hour hence, a new day will have come. The little column of witnesses proceed without speaking. The noise of the boots of marchers, scuffling the walks, seem to screech unmercifully loud.

SURELY, IT WOULD SEEM AS THOUGH THE WRAITHS OF BECKER, GYP THE BLOOD, LEFTY LOUIE, SCHMIDT, HABY AND THE REST OF THE CARAVAN ARE HERE IN A FANTASTIC VAN, LOOKING IN AT THE UNHOLY CEREMONY.

The 40 odd paces taken by the witnesses lead through a supernatural atmosphere, as though the air were filled with fiends speeding to a witch's sabbath. Now we come to the death house entrance. It is a small block-like structure with smooth walls. No windows are discernible to the chamber. There is no subway crush of men trying to hasten into this grewsome hole.

The opening of the door sends a path of dazzling light on the heads of the witnesses, just as the sudden opening of a furnace door pierces the gloom of a dark cellar.

Frankly ill at ease, the witnesses are ushered solemnly to five rows of benches. These are of quartered oak and look like church pews. Twelve feet to front and a bit to the right is the chair. It holds the center of the stage. It dominates its room and it dominates you as you scan its outlines. It is solidly-fashioned, squatty yet spidery with its black straps, belts and buckles.

ITS TWO WIDELY SEPARATED ARMS ARE OPENED WITH A GRIZZLY WELCOME. IT SEEMS A SORT OF WOLF TRAP. THE CHAIR IS BOLTED TO THE CONCRETE FLOOR AND THERE IS A BLACK MAT UNDER IT AND EXTENDING SOME TWO FEET TO THE FRONT OF IT.

Above the chair is suspended a curling wire. To that wire is attached the bell-like helmet. Inside the helmet, which is rubber lined, is one of the two electrodes. The other is to be affixed to the right leg. Once the oak door at the left of the chair is opened the convict has a profile view of the chair in which he or she is to die. Barely have you time to make a cursory inspection of death house, with its skylight over the chair, its benches and its white walls, when there is a subdued stir that tells one that death is to have its innings at once.

Executioner Elliott, a lanky, lean person, is in an alcove at the right of the chair. The convict cannot see him without turning and dying men do not turn in that seat.

From that alcove, Elliot, the executioner of six Atlantic Seaboard states and the man who turned on the current in the Sacco-Vanzetti electrocution, can see the effect of his work. He sends 12 amperes of current under 1800 volts of pressure through the blood streams of victims. He has said:

"THEY DON'T FEEL ANY PAIN IN THE CHAIR, IT PARALYZES THE BRAIN AND STOPS THE HEART RIGHT OFF."

The dread door opens as though of its own accord. It is exactly 11 o'clock. From the dim vista beyond comes a jumble of faraway voices. Possibly it is the distant goodbye of the 14 others in the death house, who are no doubt cowering behind their cell doors trying to read fate's scribblings in the dark.

Who are these strange figures coming through that hole in the white wall to move about in this pageant of death? Up to now it has not been divulged who will lead in this human sacrifice; which the Moloch-like chair is demanding in the last hour of the night. It is Ruth Snyder who comes through the door.

Chicken Served at 'Dead Man's Dinner'

By Universal Service.

OSSINGING, N. Y., Jan. 13—Judd Gray, at his "dead man's dinner," his last meal on earth, had chicken soup, his favorite dish, served to him as he sat within a steel cage. Three keepers watched him. He could see them outside, but he paid no attention.

Chicken came next, with mashed potatoes. With them was a dish of celery and stuffed olives. They were eaten to the last olive. Judd was hungry.

The chicken and "fixings" devoured, Judd turned to his dessert. Ice cream he had ordered, and "good coffee," which he had asked for especially.

DEATH ENDS THE DRAMA

Last night the drama ended for Ruth and Judd. They paid the full price of their crime as Robert Elliott, professional executioner, shot the death-dealing voltage through Sing Sing's electric chair—and the state avenged the murder of Albert Snyder.

Ruth Warns of Passion That Lives in Darkness

Avoid the love that must be cloaked with darkness and lies!

As the scales of her fate teetered back and forth, Ruth Snyder sent to women this message from the death house of Sing Sing Prison, where she awaited execution for the murder of her husband. She told them:

(Copyright, 1928, by New York Daily Mirror.)

"Love can only live in God's sunlight, if it's on the level.

"It's got to have the brains in it and it's got to have the heart in it, and what's most, it's got to be something that's always out in the daylight and the sunlight, with nothing to hide."

"Our love (her's and Judd Gray's) was not in any way bestial—it was the outcome of a great love—if I was a bad woman—I could have gotten a man with money and not a pauper to give my 'sex lure' to.

"So you can see what a pup this monkey is making of himself, in saying I had all of this and that."

CHAIR INDORSED BY CLERGY HERE

Only one voice was raised unequivocally against capital punishment in a canvass of the opinions of representative Pittsburgh clergymen of all denominations today. Most of those questioned said they approved of the death penalty. Some would not commit themselves. Dr. S. H. Goldenson said there is "a better way." But only one, the Rev. E. W. Kochin, rabbi of the Tifereth Israel Temple, Clark and Fullerton streets, who cannot speak English, came out squarely for the abolition of the electric chair. Here is what the ministers said:

THE REV. DR. PERCY G. KAMMERER, rector of Trinity Protestant Episcopal Church — Capital punishment came into being for the protection of society. Whether it serves as the best protection, is a question that requires a great deal of study, and that can only be done by experts in the field of criminology and law. It is a field in which individual personal opinion is of no value whatsoever.

THE REV. DR. S. N. HUTCHINSON, pastor of East Liberty Presbyterian Church—I still believe that the word of the Bible, "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed," is the best solution of the homicide problem in this age or any other.

THE REV. DR. W. I. WISHART, moderator of the General Assembly of the United Presbyterian Church—I think we should have capital punishment. I don't think we have reached the point where it can be wisely abolished. It is unpleasant to contemplate, but seems, from my point of view, a necessary thing.

THE RT. REV. HUGH C. BOYLE, bishop of Pittsburgh diocese of the Roman Catholic Church—I haven't any opinion on capital punishment. There is nothing that I would care to say about it.

THE RT. REV. DR. ALEXANDER MANN, bishop of Pittsburgh diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church—I have an opinion on capital punishment, but I do not care to express it. I suppose you are trying to capitalize the interest in the subject that has been raised at this moment by the execution of Mrs. Snyder. Such a discussion at this time would be tommyrot. The question of capital punishment always comes up after the execution of some notorious criminal, but it has no bearing. In 48 hours the matter will be forgotten. I cannot see that any useful purpose will be served by my airing my views.

THE REV. G. W. SHELTON, pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church—I'm for capital punishment—for it, out and out. It is the greatest protection for society. I suppose I know less about the affair that led to the execution last night than anybody else in the country. Judd—and what was the woman's name? Well, I suppose people's sympathy is going out to them today. But my sympathy goes to the poor fellow they killed. Think of the man that lost his life. We need a great deal more capital punishment. It should be surer and swifter. The Bible authorizes it.

THE REV. G. E. BRENNEMAN, pastor of the Smithfield Street Methodist Episcopal Church—It is to be regretted that the present state of society is such that capital punishment is necessary. But in view of existing conditions it is necessary for the protection of society, and is justified by the teaching of God's word.

THE REV. E. W. KOCHIN, rabbi of the Tifereth Israel congregation—According to my belief, capital punishment should be abolished.

THE REV. DR. SAMUEL H. GOLDENSON, rabbi of Rodef Shalom congregation—There is a better way than capital punishment.

CROWD FIGHTS TO GREET LINDY AT COLON

By Universal Service.

PANAMA, Jan. 13—After his three-day reception on the Pacific side of Panama, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off from Campo Lindbergh at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning and crossed the continent to France Field, landing at 10:30. After twice circling the City of Colon, the Spirit of St. Louis gracefully landed while 10,000 cheered.

From the landing field to Colon Col. Lindbergh's auto ride was a much more hectic affair than his flight across the Isthmus, featured by a terrific crush in which the police were helpless before the thousands, who fought madly to get near the famous flyer. Lindy rode with Gov. Demosthenes Arosemena of Colon Province.

Across the imaginary line and into the Canal Zone the procession traveled, and there the situation was little better so far as the excitement went, the crowds still being out of control. The crowds in the little city were augmented by people from the army posts.

Col. Lindbergh attended a dinner at the Strangers' Club in Colon.

Today

done, and are capable of big planning.

If Hoover were president, there is little doubt that this nation would do some building worthy of the world's richest country. There is also no doubt that the backing of Ford and Edison, both a million miles from professional politics, would have great influence on public opinion and voting.

B. C. FORBES, who knows finance and men that manage it, says don't invest in tips. "Buy the stocks of companies headed by the ablest brains in America."

That is the best "stock tip" ever given, if you can identify the ablest brains, and then be sure that they are using their ability for their stockholders.

SOME very able brains, years ago managed New York's subways and street car lines and the things they did to their stockholders gave a good financial imitation of Dante's Inferno. They took out tens of millions, their stockholders got stock certificates valuable as wall paper only.

THERE is, however, no doubt that the best investment is in human intelligence, and the moral side of big business has improved. Besides, honesty now pays bigger dividends than the other thing ever did.

KILAUEA, earth's biggest active volcano, is active, spouting rock, fire and lava over the Hawaiian landscape. Natives believe that the goddess is angry, and, before missionaries arrived to save them, and organize their sugar business, a few humans might have been thrown into Kilauea's fire pit, to pacify the divine anger.

NOW we know that the volcano is one of the earth's safety valves, releasing surplus heat, building more land on an ocean too big. Some day, men will take the hint, tap earth's interior fires, releasing energy inexhaustible, harnessing volcanic force as they have harnessed the lightning, instead of fearing it.

STADTLANDER OPENS DRIVE FOR SEAT

The first legislative candidate of the season appeared today when William F. Stadtlander, Eighth District, tossed his hat into the ring with the statement that he intends "to render the best possible service to the people of my district and of the state of Pennsylvania and to carry out the policies enunciated by W. L. Mellon, chairman of the Republican State Committee."

As yet no opposition has appeared to Stadtlander, who is chairman of the powerful appropriation committee of the House. In his neighboring district, the Seventh, a fight is brewing. There the organization plans a drive to defeat Frank Zak, an independent, who was elected for his first term two years ago.

Another hot legislative fight may occur in the Tenth District, where friends of former Representative Benjamin H. Patterson are considering the advisability of a campaign against James H. McClure, who recently became Speaker of the House. McClure and Patterson were close political and personal friends until the last legislative election, when the former won out by a few votes, the latter's friends charging that he was "counted out." Dr. Patterson, it was said today, has not yet decided whether to be a candidate.

STEEL PLANTS RESUME

Preparations are being made to place in blast No. 3 furnace of the Carrie group at Rankin, making six of seven furnaces in the plant in operation. The seventh is obsolete and will not be fired unless absolutely necessary.

Open Hearth Furnace No. 1 of the Homestead Steel works, idle for several months while repairs were being made, probably will resume in a short time. The 72-inch mill in the same plant will resume operations in a few days, it is expected. The McClintic-Marshall Construction Company at Rankin is ready to manufacture huge girders for a new bridge at Detroit, and other plants in the district report steel business picking up.

RULE GRANTED ON SEIZURE

Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker yesterday granted a rule on Prohibition Administrator John D. Pennington to show cause why 509 cases of assorted wines and cordials, seized from the home of Frank A. Weinstein, 723 North Negley avenue, last Monday, should not be returned.

In his petition seeking return Weinstein states the liquors are of pre-war stock, and were inventoried according to the war revenue act of 1919. He says they were possessed for consumption by himself and family and bona fide guests. The liquor now is being held in the government warehouse.

FIND BUILDER GUILTY OF FRAUD

J. Flinn, contractor of 1420 Hilldale street, accused of obtaining a loan from a bank by representing himself as the owner of property owned by others, was convicted of a misdeanor in Criminal Court before Visiting Judge William T. Darr, of Brookville. The verdict carried a recommendation for extreme mercy. J. H. Schlotter, vice president of the Dormont Savings and Trust Company, prosecutor, testified that Flinn in October, 1926, obtained a loan of $500 upon his claim of ownership of a house and lot on Palodina street, Mt. Washington, valued at $7,950 and two vacant lots on Wolford street, valued at $1,600, whereas he did not own the properties. Disposition was deferred pending a motion for a new trial.

ARE YOU a "TOXIC"

Sick Headaches

Those miserable sick headaches, those mysterious dizzy and fainting spells are a grave symptom. Usually they indicate a poisoned condition of the stomach that may end in high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries and heart failure. This toxic condition is the result of our modern habits of life, which put too great a burden upon the vital organs, especially the liver, which then becomes sluggish and fails to cleanse the blood of the poisons formed in food waste. It is generally recognized that the liver occasionally needs a little help. There is nothing better for this, as medical men know, than a little ox gall. Ox gall has been found to be a great natural stimulant for the liver, restoring it to full activity. The genuine, pure ox gall is to be had, dainty and tasteless, in the form of Dioxol tablets. Each tablet represents 10 drops of pure ox gall and costs less than 2c at good druggists. To be sure of getting the genuine, look for the name Dioxol and picture of ox's head on the package.

ACQUIT DRIVER IN DEATH OF TRUCK RIDER

Horace R. Erbeck, 23, of 249 Second avenue, Homestead, charged with involuntary manslaughter, was acquitted in Criminal Court on binding instructions by Visiting Judge William T. Darr, of Brookville.

Prosecution testimony showed that a collision on the Frankstown road, July 30, 1926, which resulted in the death of Edward B. Hoskins, 21, Negro, of rear of 345 Third avenue, Homestead, was caused by an accident.

Hoskins was an employe of Erbeck, who had a state contract for highway work, and was riding on the truck driven by Erbeck when it was pinched between another truck and an automobile at a curve.

CONVICT MINER IN ASSAULT

Accused of chewing off the ear of Frank Brinkus, reputed to have been lightweight boxing champion of the A. E. F., and stabbing him five times on the back, Ettore Spolviere, Treveskyn miner, was convicted of felonious assault and battery in Criminal Court before Judge Elder W. Marshall.

The attack occurred September 11 when the defendant attempted to chase Brinkus and some friends staging a celebration on a vacant lot adjoining the miner's home, according to the testimony. Sentence was deferred.

Move Balloon Pants Effect Up to Waist

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—The peg top trousers—recall it, standing out at the hips like the riding breeches of a British staff officer and scarcely large enough at the cuffs to pull on, is coming back.

But, members of the International Association of Clothing Designers hasten to add it will be a "modified peg top" without the tight-fitting cuff effect.

Spring models of men's clothing will show the peg effect and fall clothes will bear the full influence.

The collegian this year will surrender the many buttoned coat that for several years has covered him, almost to his chin, for two-button models, the designers have decreed.

GIRL BEGS TO BE BELIEVED KILLER

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY.

"Before God and man I would not lie, I killed Nick Anderson. My boy friend is innocent."

Thus, childishly dramatic little 17-year-old Olga Pawliskik, with her long golden curls hanging around a pale, tired, lined face, begged me to believe she is a murderess. She was about to face a coroner's inquest into the death of Anderson.

Olga and her sweetheart, Mike Poppovich, 20, both of Fair Oaks, were held for the grand jury on charges of murder.

Olga did not take the stand, but five persons testified that Anderson, dying, named Poppovich as his killer.

John Pawliskik, 12-year-old brother of Olga, the only eye-witness to the shooting to testify, upheld his sister's story that she fired at Anderson because he persisted in molesting her mother.

Police are inclined to believe that the devoted child sweetheart is staking her own life to save that of Mike, whom they feel killed the Pawliskik boarder Monday. They doubt her story. But it sounds sincere.

Tears came into the gray blue eyes of the petite Russian, and she burst into her story as if she wanted to get it over in a hurry:

"Have you ever heard of anyone weaving a terrible power over people? That is what Nick Anderson did to my father and mother. From the time he came to our house they did everything he asked them to do. At times I have felt he must have had something on them. And yet I can't imagine what it can be."

Repeated asking if she were not trying to shield her boy friend accomplished nothing. She went on firmly:

"No! No! Anderson tried to get my mother to elope, and that night I ordered him out of the house. He got so wild I was afraid of him and I pulled the gun and did it before I realized. I was never so frightened in my life. But I wasn't going to let him break up our home. My mother never encouraged him—but he was always trying to make love to her."

Her last words as she went in to sit before the coroner's jury were:

"I love Mike and I would die for him—gladly. But I wouldn't lie, because I couldn't fool God."

YOUTH ADMITS PART IN FIRE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13—(AP.)—While authorities here were planning a course of action in the confession of a 7-year-old boy to having accidentally started the fire at the Germantown Community Center on Wednesday, the sixth girl died early today from burns.

The latest victim of the flames is Sylvia Bressl, 10. She was burned about the body and had also been overcome with smoke, being one of the six, now all dead, who were trapped on the third floor porch of the frame structure housing the community building.

Four separate investigations had been started into the origin of the fire and had made little material progress until William Preno, 7, admitted to Fire Marshal Mulhern he had been the innocent cause of the blaze.

INDICT ROBBERY SUSPECT

NEW PHILADELPHIA, O., Jan. 13.—Lorin Ankrim, New Comerstown, who was in the county jail from July 29, until October 21, 1927, when the grand jury exonerated him of the charge that he murdered D. L. Buchanan, New Comerstown contractor, was fined $200 by Mayor Marion Mercer, New Comerstown, and indicted by the Tuscarawas grand jury yesterday for robbing Albert Taylor, New Comerstown, of $48.

Ankrim told his friends, he said, that he murdered Buchanan for fun.

CHURCH CAMPAIGN TO CLOSE TONIGHT

The county-wide evangelistic visitation campaign of the Pittsburgh Council of Churches will be brought to a close tonight with a meeting in the Second Presbyterian Church, Eighth street, at which time final reports will be received from representatives of the 5,000 workers. Dr. A. E. Kernahan, of Boston, director of the campaign, said that more than 5,000 persons had signified their intention of becoming church members and January 22 has been set as the day, by the 200 churches co-operating, for receiving the new members.

PITTSBURGHER FREED AS DEATH CAR DRIVER

POLICE RAIDERS STAGE CLEANUP

Police Capt. James Hoey, Lieut. William Walsh and Lieut. Dennis Hennessy staged a general cleanup downtown last night, raiding an alleged disorderly house, an alleged speakeasy and closing another establishment for refusing to obey a closing order. Eleven men and seven women were arrested and lodged in the Central police station pending hearings today in Morals and Central police court.

The first raid was conducted by Lieut. Walsh who visited a restaurant at 412 Strawberry way. Two slot machines and a small quantity of liquor were confiscated, police say. Louis Burman, 48, of 237 McKee place, alleged proprietor, was arrested on a charge of keeping a disorderly house.

Seven girls and three men were arrested in a raid on the Metropolitan Hotel, at 443 Sixth avenue. James Sands, 26, was arrested as the proprietor. The other men and women were charged with visiting a disorderly house.

Because they kept open after midnight Wednesday and furnished their patrons with musical entertainment in violation of a closing order, two proprietors of a coffee shop at 865 Wylie avenue were arrested. Six other visitors also were jailed and the establishment closed. Thomas Cherpes, 36, and George Ceppas, 26, alleged proprietors, were charged with keeping a disorderly house and five men and a girl with visiting a disorderly house.

A woman who said she was Dorothy Shea, 23, of North avenue, North Side, was arrested in Stanwix street and she will be arraigned in Morals Court today. Patrolman Richard Curry said she had been stopping men along the street.

Magic Barrel Big Hit; Dry Sleuths "Crab" Its Act

GREENSBURG, Pa., Jan. 13.—Paul Svitkovitch's "magic barrel," which brought his store and meat market and Haydenville much popularity, is no more.

From one hole in the top of the barrel flowed vinegar and from another moonshine whisky, said county detectives, who investigated reports of Paul's occult powers. Within the barrel, filled with vinegar, was a 15-gallon keg of whisky connected with a pipe to the top. Svitkovich was held for court and the barrel destroyed.

ONE HURT WHEN AUTOS CRASH IN NORTH SIDE

Harry Lampus, 500 Teese avenue, Bellevue, was cut and bruised early today when a machine in which he was riding collided with another automobile driven by W. A. Vetter, of 115½ Forty-second street, at Western and Allegheny avenues. Lampus told police that Carl Smith, 13 Magee street, was driving the car in which he was riding and that after the accident Smith fled. Four other persons in Smith's car were uninjured. Vetter was not arrested and police are searching for Smith.

BUTLER MAN, 72, DIES HANDLING REVOLVER

GLASS STRIKERS SPURN SCALE

BUTLER, Pa., Jan. 13.—(AP.)—A meeting of striking glass workers was held here yesterday to consider a Standard Plate Glass Company announcement that the company would open its plant here next Monday with a new wage scale in effect. Strikers' representatives said that the new scale would not be accepted.

Gathering of strikers near the glass plant yesterday imbued police with a fear that a disturbance might result from the attempt to open the plant.

The strike has been in progress since December 15, when 500 glass workers quit over a wage reduction.

OFFICER PRAISES HERBAL MEDICINE

Ten Herbs Gave Amazing Relief, After Everything Else Failed.

"I firmly believe that Ten Herbs is the greatest gift that has come to the people in many years," was the statement of Officer J. A. Outlaw, well-known member of the Norfolk, Va., Police Department, living at

OFFICER J. A. OUTLAW

2306 Lyons avenue, Norfolk, according to the Ten Herbs Man, who is at the May Drug Store, 529 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily demonstrating this popular medicine. "I had suffered with stomach and liver trouble for years, and tried everything in an attempt to get relief," Mr. Outlaw continued. "I hardly dared eat, for I knew that afterward I would have gas, cramps and intense pains through my chest. I was dizzy and had spots before my eyes. Billous headaches bothered me a great deal, and I was always taking something for my liver. My complexion was sallow.

"I have taken two bottles of Ten Herbs and am amazed at the relief it has given me. I can eat with a relish now, and do not have to be afraid of gas and stomach pains afterward, for all that misery has disappeared. My liver is acting better, too. I am surely thankful for the blessed relief Ten Herbs gave me, and want to recommend this medicine to the public."

Ten Herbs consists of ten of the finest natural medicinal ingredients known to mankind. It gives the system a thorough cleansing, driving out poisonous waste, matter and impurities, and has a highly beneficial effect on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. As a result, there are usually new feelings of health and strength over the body in general within a remarkably short time; and, as the medicine continues its work within the system, there are often amazing benefits, so that suffering that has been endured for years is relieved. As in the case of Officer Outlaw, Ten Herbs often gives relief after other medicines fail.

The Ten Herbs Man is at the May Drug Store, 529 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh, where he is daily meeting the public and explaining the merits of this medicine. Free sample given.

FAY KING

By FAY KING

GIVE children the right independence in their own home and they will not seek the wrong independence among strangers.

Many indulgent parents cannot understand why their children are not happy in their good homes and it is because while in the big things they are made comfortable, in the little things they are made unhappy.

It is only natural that when children grow up, they begin to want to be treated as individuals. They begin to want to do as they please, and that does not necessarily mean they do not want to do the right thing.

I have known girls to be very unhappy in good homes because their own possessions were never treated as their own. They didn't want their sisters wearing their things, or mother rummaging through their clothes closet. They hated the old discarded furniture they had to have in their room, and dared not fix things up in some foolish way that temporarily appealed to their taste.

A boy likes to have a room of his own which he can clutter up with things that interest him. His phone messages should be taken and given to him without kidding, criticism and questioning.

The reason young people so often seek the wrong companions and wrong environment is because these people and places never question, advise, criticize or ridicule them.

HALF the women in the world are frankly hoping, looking and longing for a grande passion, and the other half are cockily pretending that such things no longer exist, and saying "I don't care!"

Emotions, according to the sophisticates, went out of fashion with petticoats and pink teas. Yet every woman knows that to die without ever having known the divine spark of a real love, is never to have LIVED.

* * *

Suppressing your emotions may be smart; but it is merely suppressing his life-force within you.

HELEN ROWLAND

Northing worth while has ever been accomplished in this world, that was not born of a sublime and all-absorbing emotion. Lindbergh's love for his airplane, Edison's love for his laboratory, Jane Addams' love for humanity are all grande passions!

Until you have felt something sublime—a sublime enthusiasm, a sublime unselfishness, a sublime love—you will never write a line, paint a picture, sing a note or produce a thought or a thing that will live.

Big things are not done in this world with the head and his hands alone. It is out of the white hot flame of the heart that great books and deeds and statues and poems and enterprises are born.

* * *

To scatter your emotions around on a lot of little cheap loves and cheap amusements, in the mad search for a synthetic thrill, is to cheat yourself out of the real thing!

It is turning the Divine Fire into a lot of little fireworks that will soon fizzle out and leave you bankrupt and burnt out.

* * *

Those who get the most out of this life, are those who live passionately, intensively—and above all, EMOTIONALLY!

Those who have never felt some sort of grande passion—a grande passion for work, for beauty, for music or poetry, for success or for a human being—are already dead from the neck up.

Your emotions are your birthright and your most valuable possession. Don't let a cynical old world laugh you out of them.

* * *

They are the source of all genius, all success and all inspiration. They are the only real "KICK" you will get out of this life!

Diabetes Checked by Better Methods. The Symptoms

WE DO not fear diabetes as we did only a few years ago. The scientists devoted themselves to its study and succeeded in their task of finding a means of control.

DR. COPELAND

By the discovery of insulin and its application to diabetes, we know how to keep the disease in check.

Of course insulin is not a cure for diabetes. But by its taking the body is enabled to care for sugar as it cannot do otherwise.

It is not uncommon for a man to have well-established diabetes and hardly know there is a thing wrong with him. Excessive thirst is about the first sign of the disease.

To be thirsty every 10 minutes and to have to get up at night for a drink of water—these are suspicious symptoms. Steady loss of flesh, together with incessant thirst, must raise the suspicion that something is wrong.

When annoying thirst is observed, that should be a warning to have the urine examined. It will have been noticed for a long time that the quantity of urine has been above normal. Perhaps that fact will be explained by the amount of water consumed. But a test of the urine will give the true explanation. The presence of sugar in the urine proves that diabetes is the cause of the symptoms.

The normal quantity of urine in twenty-four hours is about a quart. A diabetic patient will pass several quarts, perhaps a gallon or more. It is surprising how great the quantity is sometimes.

It is natural that the extraction from the system of such a large amount of water, will create a demand for fluid. That helps to account for the thirst.

The presence of sugar in the urine shows that the system cannot handle sugar as it should. That is the beginning of real trouble.

Indigestion is an early symptom. The appetite may be good, but the food is not digested. All the symptoms of dyspepsia are met.

The skin is not clear. Boils and pimples are apt to be found. Repeated boils give evidence of the run-down state. Itching, terrible itching of the skin is another sign of diabetes.

Of course, one may have boils and pimples without having diabetes. But when these skin symptoms appear, together with thirst and frequent urination, there must be a suspicion of diabetes.

The nerves give notice of trouble. There may be severe cramps in the calves of the legs or elsewhere. Neuralgia is another sign of disturbed nerves.

A common symptom is headache. Sometimes this is the beginning of profound disturbances which ends in stupor and unconsciousness. This serious state may last for a day or so.

As the disease progresses the loss of flesh continues. The neck gets thin. Along with the loss of weight is a decrease in strength and vigor.

It is not uncommon in long-established diabetes to have the eyes become inflamed and troublesome. In an occasional case there may be cataract, a form known as "diabetes cataract."

If insulin is used it may not be necessary to diet, but in any event it is a good thing to reduce the sugar-carrying foods. The first care should be to eat less starches and sugar than it has been the practice to take.

Just because you get diabetes is no reason why you should die. Attention to the diet, moderation in all things, and care of the body will hold the disease in check. There may be moderate symptoms for many years and the victim lives out his normal expectancy.

Promises Long, Healthy Life To Weak, Thin-Blooded People

Scientists Discover "Mysterious Substance" in Beef Livers That Makes Rich Red Blood and Creates Strength, Vigor and Vitality—Often in 8 Days.

There's wonderful help for men and women who are rundown, weak, tired-out and thin blooded.

In New York and other big cities progressive physicians are prescribing a diet of beefs' liver.

They have found by actual tests that patients far gone with pernicious anemia—so far gone that life itself was only a matter of months—have been restored to robust health.

In order to get this "Mysterious Substance" or vitamines in a greatly condensed form one of New York's famous Laboratories is putting up a liquid elixir known to Pharmacists as Hemo-Liver.

This preparation is not a patent medicine—the vitamines are extracted by a new process from fresh beefs' liver so that all the blood making health creating substance is saved.

Thousands are being helped by Hemo-Liver—it has restored to happy health a host of men and women as well as thin, sickly children.

It is a pleasant to take elixir, which all thin blooded people and especially those who need more vigor and vitality are urged to try.

Hemo-Liver is now dispensed by all druggists who keep abreast of the times with the distinct understanding that if one bottle does not help—wonderfully—your money will be returned.

Eat more liver—and take Hemo-Liver every day—it's the one supremely good tonic for old people—it keeps them feeling younger. All May Drug Stores can supply you.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Saturday, January 14

There is a proper dignity and proportion to be observed in the performance of every act in life.—MARCUS AURELIUS.

CONFLICTING planetary aspects are seen in this day's chart. While there is likely to be dissatisfaction and jeopardy in the matter of employment, yet labor and industry are under benign rule. It is admonished that methods of duplicity and fraud be safeguarded against, that there be no justified excuse for slander or subtle undermining. Deal cautiously with corporations.

Those whose birthday it is may best succeed during the year by attending diligently to affairs in hand, shunning false positions and grounds for misrepresentation and scandal. Safeguard the employment and beware of fraud.

A child born on this day should be industrious and fairly clever, but may not do well in employment, being subject to misrepresentation and false repute, unless it take pains to preserve rigorous integrity and candor.

The best soap to use in warm water is the soap that lathers best in cold

TAKE ANY toilet soap. Try it in cold water. A simple test—yes. But it reveals true cleansing quality. If the soap is Octagon, you get generous lather instantly. Every trace of soil vanishes. Your hands rinse clean of soapy residue. Then they feel refreshed. But you use warm water? Fine! For a soap that's good in cold water is a perfect soap when the water is warm. Octagon's cocoanut oil content assures a full, rich lather in any water. A lather that cleans, too—even removes dirt that clogs the pores. Yet with all its quick, cleansing lather, the large, long-lasting cake of Octagon Toilet Soap costs only ten cents. It is pure white, too—and has a delicate fragrance you will like. A good soap in cold water—a perfect soap in hot water—Octagon Toilet Soap is used by millions for its quality alone. But Octagon users get even more—each wrapper carries a coupon. Be sure to save your Octagon coupons. You can redeem them, along with Fab coupons, for valuable premiums. Colgate & Company, Established 1806, New York.

THEATERS TO JOIN -:- IN BENEFIT SHOW -:- FOR MINERS' FAMILIES

RITA GOULD

Rita Gould, of "Gay Paree," at the Alvin next week, will appear in the midnight all-star show in the Davis Theater Thursday. Proceeds of the performance go to destitute families of Pittsburgh district miners.

JAZZ MINSTRELS AMONG TALENT FROM 13 THEATERS

The Southland Jazz Minstrels, from the Grand, will be on the program along with actors and actresses from 12 other theaters. All the theater folk are contributing their services. The Theater Managers' Association of Pittsburgh is taking care of all incidental expenses. In this manner every cent taken into the box office goes to aid families of the poverty-stricken mining towns.

CHARLES FOY

Charles Foy, son of the inimitable Eddie, and an actor of considerable more than ordinary ability, also will entertain the midnight benefit audience. He is appearing on the regular bill at the Davis next week.

JEANETTE M'DONALD

PLAN MINERS' BENEFIT

with jazz orchestras and other ensemble numbers in giving a big show, and one that will long be remembered. And all for humanity's sake.

The stage folk are not concerning themselves with the questions involved in the controversy between the miners and the coal operators. The strike in itself does not interest them. What has aroused them is the humanitarian aspect of the matter. They are filled with pity for the babies and the mothers in the mining camps, where the fathers, whether union or non-union, have been unable to supply the necessities of life to their families.

THEATERS RESPOND

A committee from the Central Labor Union, consisting of Joseph H. Duty, president of the Pittsburgh Building Trades Council; Walter Greenleaf, business agent of the Carpenters' District Council, and Joseph Thomas, business agent of the street car employes' union, called on D. A. Harris, president of the Theater Managers' Association of Pittsburgh, and made an appeal for aid for the miners' dependents. They said the children of non-union as well as union miners were suffering and would share in any relief given.

Mr. Harris called a meeting of the association, which was attended by representatives of the Alvin, Sheridan Square, Nixon, Pitt, Harris, Grand, Davis, Loew's Penn, Loew's Aldine and Gayety theaters. On being assured that their action could not be construed as taking sides in the miners' strike, and on the Central Labor Union committee's pledge not to send outside of the county any of the money raised, but to use it under the supervision of the Theater Managers' Association for the purchase of food, clothing, medicine and other necessities for the miners' women and children, the managers agreed to put on two midnight benefit shows—one at the Davis next Thursday and another, with entirely different acts, at the Sheridan Square on Thursday, January 26. The acts are to come from the theaters named and from the Liberty and Schenley in addition.

The performers are to give their services without charge, and all incidental expenses will be borne by the managers' association. With nothing to be deducted for expenses, the gross receipts will be handed over for the relief work. All seats will be reserved, and there will be but one price, $1. Seats are on sale for the show at the Davis at the box office of that theater now. It is expected there will be a tremendous demand for them.

The desperate situation of thousands of miners' families was recently set forth in an appeal for aid promulgated and jointly signed by about 30 Pittsburgh clergymen, including three bishops and representing 10 Protestant denominations and the Roman Catholic, Eastern Orthodox and Jewish churches. Social workers who have investigated conditions also report that the need for aid is urgent. Hundreds of families have been evicted from their homes for non-payment of rent and are living in hastily-constructed barracks.

Capacity houses at the benefit shows will furnish a tidy sum with which to relieve part of the distress. With such performers slated to appear as Rita Gould, star of "Gay Paree;" Jeanette McDonald, of "One Sunny Day," the Dixie Daisies, Southland Jazz Minstrels, Charles Foy; Mickey Daniels and Peggy Eames, of "Our Gang" movie comedies, in person; Ross and Ross, bag punchers; the Six Jolly Jesters; Al. H. Wilson, monolgist; Fred and Jane Rinehart, black face comedians, and the Four Symphonists, it is believed there will be a rush for tickets.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON PITTSBURGH SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

Military Ball by Aero Club on February 3, Looked Forward to as "Quite the Thing"

AFTER the charity ball is over, society begins to anticipate the next big dance of the year, the annual military ball of the Aero Club. The ball this year will be held on Friday, February 3, in the William Penn Hotel ballroom, as usual. Invitations are now being mailed, I hear, to the society folks of the city.

The Aero ball has always been a popular event, but this year, as one can easily imagine, it will be "quite the thing," since aviation has created so much interest all over the world during the past year through the achievements of Lindbergh and others.

According to custom, there will be a number of aviation celebrities at the ball. And the proceeds will be used for the education of aviators and other means of advancing aviation in this locality.

James M. Magee, a lieutenant colonel in the Air Corps Reserve, is chairman of the patrons' committee, assisted by such well-known men as Frank Dickson, Col. William Thaw, Bennett Oliver, Charles L. Snowden, Jr., A. W. Wyckoff and Hal Bazley.

The younger set, as well as its "elders," is always represented at the Aero ball. And this year the young folks of society will have most charming representatives in a group of girls, captained by Mary Louise Johnston, a bud of this season, who will sell cigarets.

The girls are Josephine Nicola, Betty Scott, Mary Oliver, Virginia Goldsbury and a group of this season's debbies—Jane Foster, Anne King Scott, Mary Childs and Elizabeth George.

Just when one is sure that the last party for the debbies of this season is over, another entertainment is planned for a popular bud. For that matter, I can recall few seasons when the debutantes have been so much entertained as this year.

The very newest debutante party to be planned is a bridge Mrs. Taylor Allderdice will give in her home on Friday afternoon, January 27. The guests of honor will be Florence Wainwright, debutante daughter of Mrs. Harris E. Wainwright, and Mary Mellon McClung, debutante daughter of the Samuel Alfred McClungs.

Mrs. Walter Chess, of Bennington avenue, accompanied by Miss Nell Stewart, will sail for Europe a week from the wedding of her daughter, Dorothea. Dorothea's marriage to Robert Markham Marshall will be an event, you will recall, of tomorrow.

The ceremony will be performed at 12:30 tomorrow afternoon in the Church of the Redeemer, with the rector, the Rev. Robert N. Meade, as officiant.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding will be two sisters of the bride, Mrs. John M. Heffron, of Greenwich, Conn., and Mrs. Charles Turner Joy, of Washington, D. C.

Mrs. J. Frank Drake and her daughters Ruth and Virginia are in New York.

Mrs. Walter A. Graham, of Clarion, Pa., has made known the engagement of her daughter, Miss Katherine C. Graham, to Edward C. Byrnes, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Byrnes, of Stratford avenue. An early June wedding is planned.

* * *

Mrs. Hardina Smith entertained the T. N. Club in her home on Wilkins avenue Tuesday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Turner, who were celebrating their twenty-eighth wedding anniversary.

* * *

Mrs. Maurice Finkelhor and Miss Bessie D. Kann, of Beacon street, will sail tomorrow on the Homeric for a Mediterranean cruise.

* * *

Mrs. Lonie Prosser Hammer, of Braddock avenue, Swissvale, has announced the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lois Evelyn Hammer, to Charles J. Fleisch, of this city.

The executive committee of the Pittsburgh Alumnae Chapter of the Zeta Tau Alpha fraternity will give its annual bridge tea for members Saturday, January 21, in the chapter house in North Craig street. Miss Mary Kammerer is in charge and Miss Louise B. Wright is president of the chapter.

* * *

Mrs. S. E. Donaldson is chairman of the hostess committee for the January meeting of Steel City Chapter No. 341, O. E. S., to be held next Thursday night in the East End Temple.

W. C. T. U. WILL HOLD "VICTORY DAY" LUNCH

"Victory day," the eighth anniversary of national prohibition, will be celebrated by the Wilkinsburg Women's Christian Temperance Union with a luncheon tomorrow in the Penn-Lincoln Hotel. The Rev. W. Wofford T. Duncan, pastor of Emory Methodist Episcopal Church, will be the speaker and and Mrs. E. J. Gibson is to serve as toastmistress. Mrs. Woolridge, president of the organization, will introduce Mrs. Gibson and Mrs. R. B. Robinson will bring greetings from the state. The reservations are being taken by Mrs. B. F. Lee and Mrs. H. P. Meids.

Mrs. Harvey Gaul is chairman of the committee which will have charge of the luncheon to be given tomorrow in the Woman's City Club honoring Mrs. Margaret Briscoe Hopkins. The committee will also include Mrs. Edward Howard Bingler, Mrs. Hubert Chapman, Mrs. Dulce Fiske-Fairman, Miss Bessie Johnson, Mrs. Samuel Miller, Mrs. A. S. F. Keister and Miss Cora Helen Coolidge.

Mrs. Roy Arthur Hunt and Mrs. Frances Spear Reed will pour at the tea in the City Club Sunday afternoon and assisting them will be Mrs. Joseph Vogt, Jr., Mrs. A. S. F. Keister, Miss Mary R. GREAT CROWDS SEE ·:· SNOOZER, JR., AT ·:· SUN-TELE AD CORNER

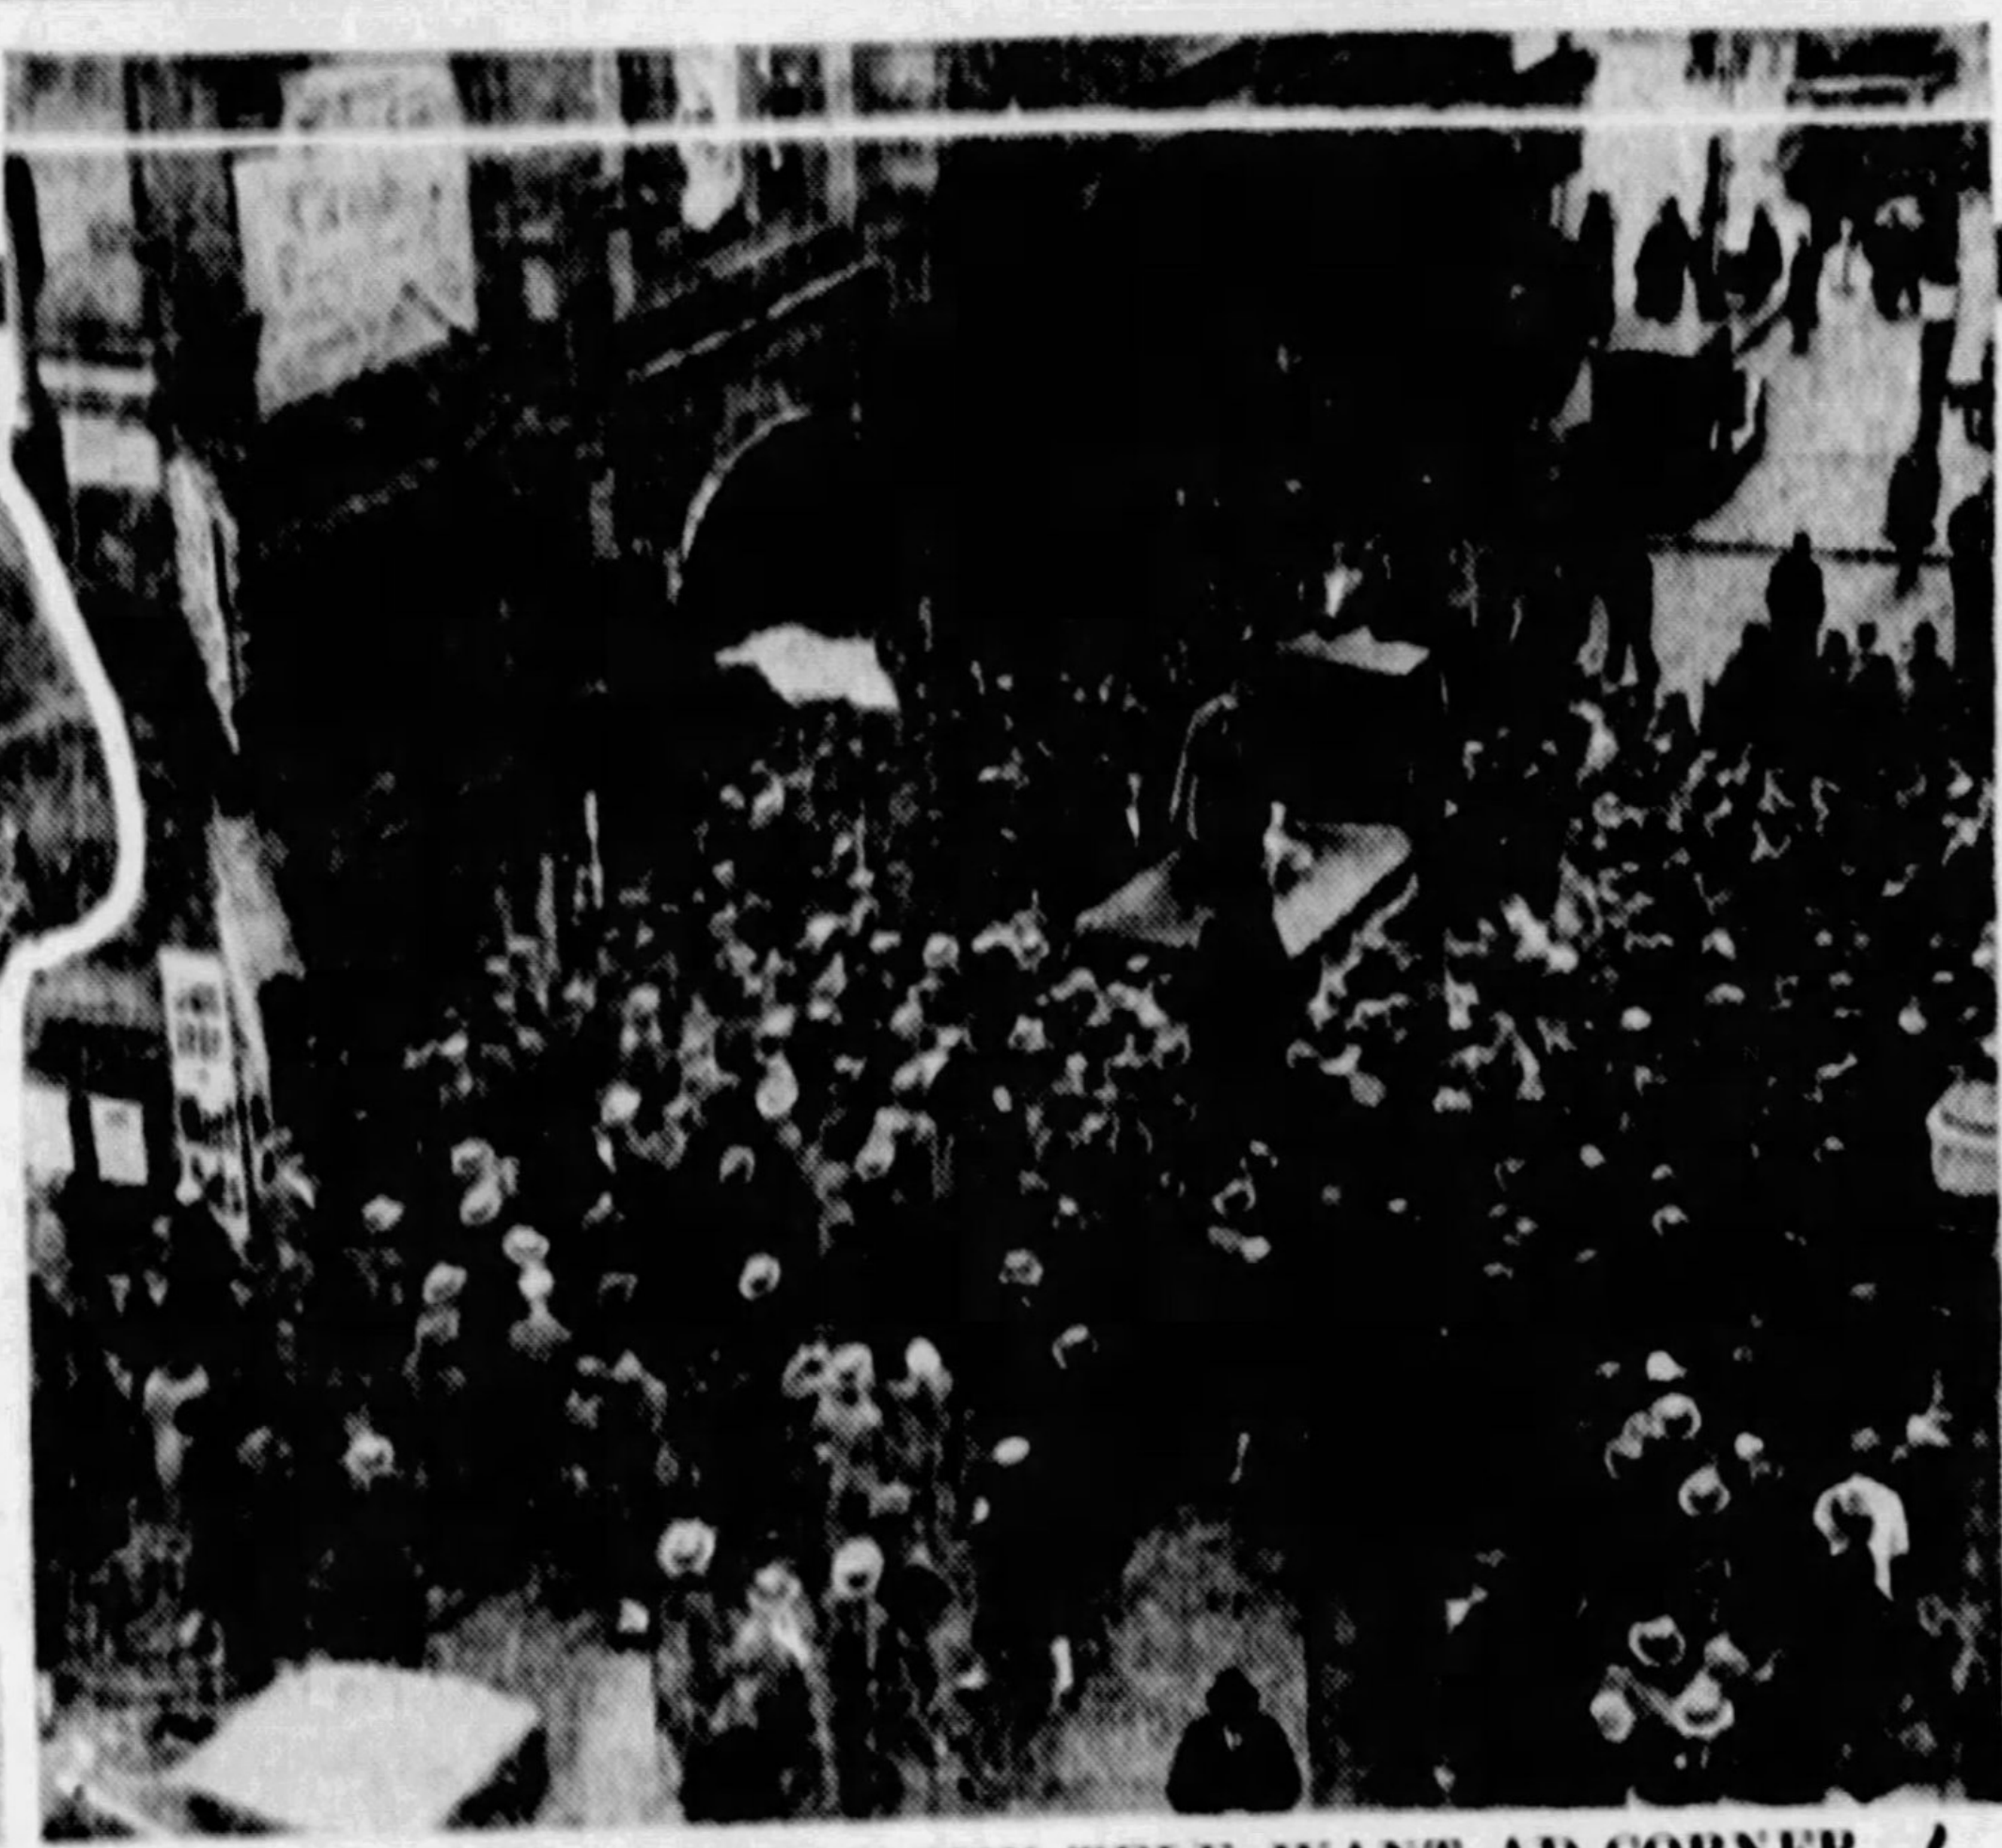
SNOOZER LOOKS THEM OVER

Aboard "Eddie Polo," Mounted Policeman Frank Froelich's prize horse, Snoozer, Jr., hailed the most intelligent dog in vaudeville, looked over the great crowd assembled yesterday to see him perform before the new Sun-Tele Want-Ad office, Fifth avenue and Market street.



THOUSANDS SEE SHOW AT SUN-TELE WANT-AD CORNER

Thousands of persons took 10 or 15 minutes from their noon lunch hour to see Snoozer, Jr., appearing at the Aldine Theater this week, do his stuff. From a Sun-Tele circulation truck Snoozer went through his paces with a speed and intelligence that amazed the crowd which jammed Market street in front of the Sun-Tele Want-Ad Corner to its fullest and left an overflow into Fifth and Liberty avenues.

SNOOZER, JR.

And this is Snoozer, Jr., who, after looking over the new Want-Ad office, looked up at his owner with a knowing glance which clearly said, "Well, that's certainly a convenient place to leave your Want-Ad copy, isn't it?"

Mr. Lhevinne

The Young Men and Women's Hebrew Association presented Josef Lhevinne and his wife Rosina in a very attractive piano recital last night. The Morris Kaufmann auditorium was filled with enthusiasts who called for encores enough to build another program; we were grateful for these extras but the concert became unreasonably long.

Like good musicians both pianists played with marvelous restraint. Their ensemble playing showed all the rich tone which is possible in two-piano compositions, and besides, charming flexibility with clarity of design and accuracy in rhythm. Schumann's variations may be mentioned among his masterpieces; there was nothing academic in last night's interpretation, only a kind of gentle freedom and much warmth of feeling. The second group of ensemble pieces were modern; Saint-Saens in a typical idiom, Dupin representing the younger French school, and Infanta with a sort of Spanish "Chopsticks." Among the encores were Duvernoy's Etude "Feu Roulant" and the ravishing waltz from Arensky's Suite.

Lhevinne's solo numbers were played in his well-known style. The extreme clarity in his playing was well suited to the Beethoven mosaics; although the finale of the Waldstein Sonata might be more joyous, he kept this Rhenish wine-gathers' song in true folk spirit. The first movement suggested exactly what the Germans like to play into it, a nice family out for a morning walk along the Rhine. The Chopin group kept entirely to miniatures, a very pleasant selection to which the pianist added the "Butterfly" etude and Mazurka. The Evler arrangement of the "Blue Danube" has about as much musical value as the "Maiden's Prayer," and I believe everyone was glad to remain a while longer to hear a brilliant rendition of Liszt's "Campanella."

Democrats Want Al to Join Klan---Will

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 13.—As usual the Democrats fooled everybody including themselves, and Houston got the convention. I certainly did what I was sent here to do, I kept it out of Oklahoma, they went to Texas on account of it being a doubtful state.

WILL ROGERS

It looks like a gesture to Al Smith to join the Klan. But don't let 'em bluff you, Al, you go on down there, you will be received great, and I will bet you get a square deal if you can call getting the nomination on the Democratic ticket a square deal. Save me a corner room at the Rica Hotel with plenty of windows, an electric fan, and mosquito netting.

Yours,
WILL ROGERS.

3 BOYS LOST IN CARRICK MINE

Three Carrick schoolboys were lost for several hours yesterday in an abandoned coal mine at the foot of Laughlin avenue, Carrick, and were not found until after a wide police search. The boys are Edward Odes, 11, of 201 Linwood avenue; Michael Frank, 14, and Walter Smith, 12, both of 122 Laughlin avenue.

The boys wandered into the mine at the close of school yesterday and finally lost their way in the darkness. Several hours later the police were asked to search for them. Other boys directed them to the mine and with lights the searchers entered and found the boys huddled together a short distance from the entrance.

SEEK REMOVAL OF ROAD MEN

Removal from office of Dan P. Lardin and Bernard Petrak, road supervisors of Frazer township, was asked in a petition of 41 township residents presented in Quarter Sessions Court. The supervisors are accused of failing to perform their duties and neglecting 11 miles of unimproved roads in the westerly portion of the township to such an extent that the roads are impassable and dangerous in places. Lardin was elected in November, 1925, and Petrak in November, 1928, each for six years. Judge James R. Macfarlane fixed January 19 for a hearing.

Still They Come—These "Nights" As Movie Makers Contemplate Plans For Their New Pictures

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Motion Picture Editor of Universal Service.

LOS ANGELES, Ja. 13.

WE'VE had London nights; we've had Chicago nights, and now Harry Cohn is going to give us "Paris Nights"—although Mr. Cohn says "Paris Nights" is only a temporary title. I wonder if the exhibitors really like these sensational monikers? "London After Midnight" was a "wow" of a picture, but the name didn't measure up to its entertainment value. Let's hope "Paris Nights" is as good a picture. Warner Baxter and Margaret Livingstone have been signed for the principal parts in what Mr. Cohn admits is heavy "drammer."

Let me hesitate here a moment and tell a story about Margaret Livingstone. Along about Christmas time she saw a very pretty girl in the 5-and-10-cent store. She inquired and found the girl's name was Dorothy Ward. "You'd be great in pictures," she said. Then she went out and interested Ernest Cowell, a Hollywood agent, who came back to find the girl. Meanwhile, she had been fired. A search for two days located her and now to make a long story short, the girl's at the DeMille studio playing a part in "The Godless Girl," with the prospects of a contract.

Well, I have met George Bancroft. All the time he has been smiling his way through yards of film as a heavy villain I never happened to meet him. I saw him in conference with his director, Josef Von Sternberg. They were discussing "Blackjack," the successor to "Underworld." This is the title of Oliver H. P. Garrett's original story, written especially for Mr. Bancroft and Evelyn Brent. It's to have all the color of "Underworld" and all the thrill of a melodrama. It will have to travel fast to equal "Underworld." Am I right?

One so seldom meets Jesse L. Lasky when he has a free moment that I welcomed the chance to discuss his plans for Franz Molnar. Molnar, Mr. Lasky assures me, will be permitted to write with a free hand. In other words, no attempt will be made to movieize his work. "We tried a rather unique experiment with Molnar," said Mr. Lasky. "He was shown six pictures and then given an opportunity to state which star appealed to him most for his first scenario. He chose Menjou, saying he understood better Menjou's sophisticated European characterizations."

If you read "Out of the Ruins," in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, by Sir Phillip Gibbs, you will be interested to hear that First National plans to make it one of their heavy productions for 1928. Nearly everyone read the story and commented on the Gibbs method of dealing with a new angle of the war. He let the French tell their side of the war and how the coming of the Americans affected them.

Snapshots of Hollywood happenings: Edmund Lowe with a trick mustache that is too new to seem natural. Jack Dempsey trying to teach Estelle Taylor to drive a roadster. The Mayer girls, Irene and Louise, home from New York, lunching at the Montmarte with Katherine Bennett. William Russell dashing across the Fox lot in evening clothes with his sleeves rolled to his elbow. Doris Arbuckle passing around fake candy and doughnuts to plenty of willing customers.

Jannings Explains Realism In "Passion"

Revolutionary scenes in his latest starring Paramount picture, "The Last Command," brought memories of real peril to Emil Jannings.

"We went through something very similar to this in Berlin at the close of the great war," said Jannings. "Following the flight of the Kaiser, the reins of government were slack and the people were discontented.

"At that time we were engaged in making "Passion" in the studio. Everyone who has seen that picture remarks upon the amazing savagery of the French revolution mob scenes. Lubitsch was very clever in taking advantage of the current upheaval. We used thousands of people with revolution in their souls, and the result was a realism which impressed the whole world.

"There was a food shortage in Berlin at the time and most of these people were on the thin edge of starvation. There were times when Lubitsch was afraid they would get completely out of hand. Only the fact that we were able to pay them for their work at the end of each day prevented them from venting their discontent by wrecking the studio."

In "The Last Command," which Josef von Sternberg directed for Paramount, Jannings plays the role of a Russian general caught in the Russian upheaval. Evelyn Brent and William Powell are featured in support of Jannings.

Langdon Wrecks Eight Autos In Picture

Despite personal tastes that are almost Spartan in their simplicity, Harry Langdon orders his automobiles the way a thrifty Scottish housewife would order eggs!

"Send me up half a dozen of your cheapest cold storage roadsters right away—I want to throw 'em over a cliff!"

That, literally, was the way the comedy king marketed for a well-known make of medium priced automobile during the filming of his latest picture, "The Chaser," at the First National Studios.

The closing sequence of the production shows Harry in the rumble seat of a runaway roadster as it balances dizzily on the edge of a precipice. It is one of the most thrilling high spots of the picture. The car crashes into the abyss, and eight trials were required before it could be induced to take the plunge properly.

Accordingly, after wrecking two roadsters, Langdon issued instructions that six more be lined up ready for emergency. All of them went hurtling over the 1,000-foot drop from a high point on Mulholland drive, before the five cameras cranking the scene caught what was wanted—on the very last attempt.

Comedies, Magic in Bills of Next Week

With Chic Sale, Rita Gould and Frank Gaby in the big company, "Gay Paree" is coming to the Alvin Monday. The production is a New York Winter Garden production of the revue type. In addition to evening performances there will be the usual Wednesday and Saturday matinees.

Howard Thurston, the magician who will play his annual engagement in the Pitt, beginning Monday night, with the usual matinees, Thursday and Saturday, has taught many famous persons sleight of hand. He says the most difficult pupil he has ever had was the late John L. Sullivan.

The Nixon will house for one week only, beginning Monday evening, January 16, a new musical comedy, "One Sunny Day," which will be presented by Hassard Short, who staged the yearly editions of "The Music Box Revue."

Rosaline Ruby, songstress, will be on the program of Keith-Albee vaudeville in the Davis next week. On the screen will be Esther Ralston in "The Spotlight."

Mulhall Stars In Film Version of Stage Comedy

Jack Mulhall, First National player, who has recently been "teamed" with Dorothy Mackaill, is to do it alone in his next picture for that company. This will be a screen version of George S. Kaufman's stage comedy, "The Butter and Egg Man," which deals with the vicissitudes besetting the path of a youthful producer of plays.

Among Mulhall's recent pictures are "See You in Jail," "Smile, Brother, Smile," "The Crystal Cup," "Man Crazy," "The Poor Nut" and "Ladies' Night in a Turkish Bath," which he has just completed with Dorothy Mackaill, but which has not yet been released.

SIX-ACT FLOOR SHOW BOOKED FOR SANDERS'

Sanders, on the Freeport highway, Aspinwall, is to present a complete traveling unit of a dance orchestra and floor show Saturday night when Bill Stewart and his Night Club Revue play a one-night engagement. Six acts are included in the revue part of the presentation, while 10 musicians comprise the dance orchestra. Mr. Stewart directs both the dance orchestra and the principals in the supplementary acts.

Richard Dix Plays Salesman Role On Screen

A few years ago, when Richard Dix was a member of the Morosco Stock Company in Los Angeles, he played the role of the wise-cracking advertising man in the stage play, "It Pays to Advertise." At present he has a somewhat similar role in portraying the character of Richard Shelby, golf suit salesman, in his new Paramount starring picture, "Sporting Goods."

In one sequence of Dix's new screen farce, which Malcolm St. Clair is directing, he has to sell a big order to Ford Sterling. Dix surprised both the comedian and the director by glibly reciting a high-powered sales talk. Questioned, Dix told them he was using the lines from the old stage play. The lines fitted into the action almost perfectly, and saved Dix from memorizing several pages of new dialogue.

Gertrude Olmstead is the leading woman in "Sporting Goods," which was adapted for the screen by Tom Crizer and Ray Harris.

PAROLE DODGER SURRENDERS, POSTS BOND

Robert "Red" Crystal, former Turtle Creek saloonkeeper for whom a Federal bench warrant was issued for failure to report to Supt. R. H. McBride of the Parting of the Ways Home, his parole officer, yesterday surrendered himself to the United States marshal. He was released under $1,000 bond pending a hearing next Friday to show cause why his three-year parole, granted him December 16, should not be cancelled.

Originally he had received a 14-month sentence for "shaking down" saloonkeepers and impersonating government prohibition agents.

The ruling to show cause was granted on a motion of Assistant Federal District Attorney Joseph A. Richardson, who questioned the right of the court to substitute the parole after expiration of the term of court at which the prison sentence had been imposed.

The parole had been granted on the recommendation of Federal District Attorney John D. Meyer because of "the manner in which Crystal had been treated by his attorney in the original trial."

Jesse King, a former state policeman, and Joseph L. Flavin, a former prohibition agent, convicted with Crystal last May, are in the penitentiary.

and then! Science Found the Way to Combat Our Greatest Enemy

FOR CENTURIES past thousands of human beings suffered and doctored—and did not know what ailed them—trying first one medicine, then another, without benefit.
Few ever suspected they had symptoms of System Poisoning, which physicians now term TOXEMIA—our great enemy to health and long life.
Ordinary laxative pills and waters do not dislodge the poisonous bacteria and wastes that cling to intestinal lining; that's why men, women and children who take them when constipated, continue to suffer from one ailment or another—which are most probably symptoms or indications of oncoming TOXEMIA. No doubt millions have contracted diseases from which they never recovered, and all because of wrong treatment.
But science has found the way to successfully combat this insidious menace, through combining an internal antiseptic with a mild efficacious laxative—and then they named it PARTOLA—"The Doctor in Candy Form."
No matter how you feel, don't ignore slight ills or stomach disorders and irregular bowel action. Take no chances with system poisoning. Get a box of PARTOLA—play safe always! All good druggists sell regular box 30c, double size 50c. Doctors prescribe it now.

SECOND NEWS SECTION THE SUN-TELEGRAPH SPORTS FEATURES

Crash in a Swamp and "Lindy" Is Reported Killed—Flies With Father and Mother

Col. Lindbergh's first night flying was done over the swollen Mississippi, a thrilling experience on his way North. At Lincoln, Neb., as he told yesterday, there was a reunion with old aviator friends, an attempt to test Bud Gurney's parachute, which involved some dangerous flying, then a barnstorming tour that produced little money, and a struggle to save the Jenny plane in a fierce electrical storm. Lindbergh was learning a lot and having a good time.

"Lindy" Would Be Army Cadet

CHAPTER VI.

THE next morning was overcast with local showers, which were visible in every direction. I took off soon after daybreak and after flying through several storms landed in a hayfield at Forest City, Ia., where I serviced the ship between showers and took off on the final flight to Shakopee, Minn., where I expected to meet my father and carry him around on his campaign.

I found Shakopee covered by a cloudburst, and, in flying around waiting for the storm to pass so that I could land, I got into a heavy shower near Savage. One of the cylinders cut out, and I was circling preparatory to landing in a clover field when two more stopped firing. I was flying at less than a 200-foot altitude and losing that rapidly.

It was necessary to land immediately but the only choice of landing places lay between a swamp and high trees. I took the swamp and cut the throttle. When the wheels touched earth they rolled about twenty feet, sank in to the spreader bar and we nosed over.

The rudder did not quite touch the swamp grass and the plane stopped after passing through three-quarters of a semi-circle, with the radiator cap and top wing resting on the ground. I was hanging on the safety belt but when I tried to open the clasp with one hand, holding on with the other to keep from falling out on my head, I found it to be jammed. After several futile attempts to open it I reverted to the two strap buckles at the end of the belt to release myself from the cockpit.

All this required not more than two or three minutes.

"Lindy" Reported Killed

After getting out of the cockpit I inspected the plane carefully. Again there was little actual damage. The propeller was badly cracked and would have to be replaced; there was a crack in the spreader board which required winding with strong cord. Otherwise the plane was in perfect condition, although splashed with mud.

For once there was no one in sight, and I made my way through the swamp to the nearest farmhouse. On the way I found that there was solid ground along the edge of the swamp less than one hundred yards from the plane, from which I could take off.

The farmer had seen the plane pass over in the rain and was on his way down towards the swamp when I met him. He informed me that it was not possible to get horses through the mire out to the ship and that he had no idea of how I was to get it back to hard sod again.

I borrowed a rope from him to use in pulling the tail back to a normal position and we started back to the swamp.

Meanwhile it seems that two boys had seen me land, and, when I did not emerge from the cockpit immediately, had run to Savage with the news that "an aviator had landed upside down in the swamp" and that they had "gone up and felt of his neck and that it was stiff and he was stone dead."

I had flown over the town in the rain only a few minutes before, and as in those days it was not difficult for any one to believe anything about an airplane the town promptly locked its doors and came crawling and wading through the swamp. The older inhabitants followed the railroad track around its edge and by the time I returned with the farmer and a rope there were enough townspeople to solve my problem by carrying the ship back on to solid ground.

They were undoubtedly much disappointed at having come so far on a false alarm, but turned to willingly to help me get the ship out of the swamp.

Exaggeration Disgusts

The next edition of one of the Minneapolis papers carried the following item, which typically exemplifies what has been the average man's knowledge of aeronautics:

AIRPLANE CRASHES NEAR SAVAGE.

Charles A. Lindbergh, son of ex-Congressman Lindbergh, crashed near Savage, Minnesota, this morning. He was flying in his plane three hundred feet above the ground when it suddenly went into a nose dive and landed on its propeller in a swamp. Lindbergh says he will be flying again in three days.

After reading this and similar accounts of equally minor accidents of flight, it is little wonder that the average man would far rather watch some one else fly, and read of the narrow escapes from death when some pilot has had a forced landing or a blowout, than to ride himself. Even in the post-war days of now obsolete equipment, nearly all of the serious accidents were caused by inexperienced pilots who were then allowed to fly or to attempt to fly—without license or restriction about anything they could coax into the air—and to carry any one who might be beguiled into riding with them.

Father and Mother Fly

My next move was to wire to Little Falls for a propeller which Wyche had expressed from America, and two days later joined my father in his campaign at Marshall.

My father had been opposed to my flying from the first and had never flown himself. However, he had agreed to go up with me at the first opportunity, and one afternoon he climbed into the cockpit and we flew over Redwood Falls together. From that day on I never heard a word against my flying and he never missed a chance to ride in the plane.

After the campaign was over I spent the remainder of the summer barnstorming through Minnesota, Northern Iowa and Western Wisconsin. Most of the time I was alone, but I took one student around with me for a few weeks while I was teaching him to fly, and then I barnstormed Southern Minnesota with my mother for 10 days. My mother had never objected to my flying, and after her first flight at Janesville, Minn., she became an enthusiast herself.

We had been together constantly up to the start of my flying career and had both looked forward to flying around together. Consequently when the opportunity presented itself I wired her to meet me at Janesville.

My mother enjoyed flying from the first and has made a number of flights with me, including a round trip between Chicago and St. Louis in the mail compartment of my plane.

MOTHER FEEDS FIRE OIL SHE AND BABY SUCCUMB

MRS. E. WHITE

When a can of crude oil with which she hastened a coal fire in her home at Manifold, near Washington, Pa., exploded yesterday, Mrs. Elizabeth White, 19, was burned to death.

JAMES WHITE

Her 10-month-old baby, James, sleeping near the stove, also was a victim of the flames which enveloped the room. They died in the Washington hospital.

SIDNEY TREVENA

Seeing the woman's clothing in flames, Sidney Trevena, 17, and Lawrence White, 20, husband, attempted to extinguish the flames with a blanket. Both men suffered severe burns on the hands during their futile effort to save the mother and baby. White said he warned his wife against the use of crude oil to hasten the coal fire.

LAWRENCE WHITE

The tragedy occurred in Mrs. White's bedroom. She poured oil from a can on the dying embers of the coal fire. The picture shows White holding a piece of the oil can which exploded in his wife's hands. The woman, with her baby in her arms fled to the street. White is employed in the coal mines.

WET DEFI HURLED AT DEMOCRATS

By Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—The wet issue was flung squarely into the lap of the Democratic party at the traditional Jackson Day dinner last night when Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland delivered a vigorous condemnation of prohibition and other sumptuary federal legislation which he branded a menace to the continuance of democratic government in this country.

Ritchie's speech dropped like a bolt of lightning into a meeting which had been heralded as a "harmony feast" of party leaders, designed to heal the wounds laid open by the "wet and dry" fight and the Smith-McAdoo feud in the national convention of 1924.

Gathered about him at the banquet table were 1,500 men and women from every section of the country, all stalwart party workers who had assembled there to hear sounded the "keynote" on which the Democrats will make their fight for victory in 1928.

PLEA FOR HARMONY

Included in the group were Democratic chieftains, and several prospective presidential candidates, some of whom preceded him with a plea for party unity and harmony and the stifling of bitter controversial questions which might lead to factional splits and consequent disaster as in the past.

Another bombshell dropped when Gov. Al Smith of New York, regarded as the outstanding Democratic candidate for president, in a letter read to the assembled Democratic hosts, urged a platform with decisive declarations on prohibition, religious tolerance and other issues.

"We cannot carry water on both shoulders," Smith declared. "The Democratic party must talk to the American people in no uncertain terms."

SMITH'S PLATFORM

In a powerful summation of Democratic principles, Smith urges the party to stand back of these articles of political faith:

"The greatest degree of local self-government by the states.

"The minimum of interference by the Federal government or any state with the local habits and concerns of any other state.

"Legislation for the interest of all and not for any class or group.

"Non-interference with the internal affairs of other nations.

"Tolerance of conflicting opinion."

"When we follow these we succeed. We should follow them now," Smith declared.

Gov. Smith warned that platform generalities will get the party nowhere. He advised against dodging issues in 1928. He asked that the national committee get busy at once and draft a tentative platform to be submitted to the national convention.

First to stress the plea for harmony was Toastmaster John W. Davis, Democratic standard-bearer in 1924, who, in his introductory remarks, declared that the test of party loyalty was a willingness to support those selected to "carry the banner against the common foe."

OUTLINES STAND

Waiving aside all pleas to avoid controversial subjects, Ritchie proceeded to "speak the language of democracy" and boldly outlined the principles which he said the Democratic party must adopt and the type of leader it must choose to win victory in 1928.

He condemned the "religious" issue as the test of a candidate's fitness for the presidency and flayed prohibition, the proposed Federal Department of Education and the child labor amendment as further developments of Federal bureaucracy.

Although regarded as a presidential candidate himself, Ritchie heaped praise upon three of his outstanding rivals, Gov. Al Smith of New York, Senator James A. Reed of Missouri and Senator Thomas Walsh of Montana, for their efforts in keeping alive the spirit of Democratic government in the nation.

Reed and Walsh were among the speakers of the night, as was William Gibbs McAdoo, the recognized leader of the dry wing of the party. Gov. Smith was not present.

SIDEWALKS OF PITTSBURGH

by Harvey J. Boyle

YOU go up two flights of stairs off Sixth avenue and suddenly come upon a homey room in which there is a piano. It is the studio of the Gernerts, John and Charles, who have been connected with things musical in Pittsburgh for a long, long time. Stories of the old days are told with delightful punctuations on the piano with melodies. The reminiscences, delightful in themselves, are heightened with appropriate accompaniment.

One of the early open air concerts in the history of the city was recalled. It was held in a grove in 1878, near the present site of the Pittsburgh Hospital in Frankstown avenue. The clean and charming nurses of that hospital, as they answer the red lights or giggle at the jokes of the doctors (all nurses do both), may not realize that in their daily work they are close to the scene where, perhaps, of a soft summer night many, many years ago, some of the noted society girls in Pittsburgh first held hands with their sweethearts, while on the platform a noted orchestra, the Guenther-Toerge combination, unfolded magically, "Lo, Hear the Gentle Lark," "Dance of the Hour," or the strains of a polka.

At some of the concerts the quality folks of the city drove out in buggies and carriages and seated in them would listen to the concerts. But thanks to the backing of the late Col. J. M. Schoonmaker and others, a pavillion was at last constructed. There were even stalls constructed so that the horses would not need to stand hitched to the carriages throughout the evening.

The Gernerts recall what they heard when quite young, about a Pittsburgher, Stephen C. Foster, who wrote immortal folk songs of the South. He was not a good musician. He was like the present song writer, Irving Berlin, in that both virtually accomplished their art with one finger picking melodies on the piano.

THERE is in the downtown district a public dance hall where the working girls and the working boys gather nightly to step the light fantastic. One of the most popular figures is a one-legged man who dances with the aid of a crutch. He never misses a dance. He is one of the best dancers in the city. He tried out a wooden leg, once, but he found he got around much more sprightly with his crutch.

NEXT DANCE?
SURE!

HENRY FORD, interested in the revival of the old-time dances, has a Pittsburgh counterpart in Johnny Jones, of the South Side, who, a few years ago, decided to stage old-fashioned dancing, although he did not go back as far as Ford. Johnny went back to the days before the Bunny Hug, the Fox Trot, the Charleston and the Black Bottom, to refurbish the charm of the Waltz, the Two-step and the Schottische.

MARK ROBERTS, treasurer of the Volunteer Firemen's Association, stopped in the other night, and as one volunteer fireman to another, asked that we say something about the big concert to be held by the firemen next April. There is a bond between volunteer firemen that surpasseth understanding, unless you appreciate the comradeship that the volunteers get standing side by side at the nozzle. Consequently, we are glad to mention the concert.

HOW I LOVE MY VOLUNTEER FIREMEN

A YOUNG GIRL in Liberty avenue discovered the other day it is quite unlucky to walk under a ladder. She never took much stock in the old superstition until she walked under the ladder in question, just in time to receive on her head a bucket of paint dropped from the hands of a painter.

HILL REMOVAL URGED

WOULD BUILD AUDITORIUM ON SITE

The proposal to remove Monument Hill, North Side, has been revived by Councilman Harry A. Little.

The project, it was learned today, is being seriously considered by the City Department of Public Works, which is preparing an extensive report upon its cost and probable advantages.

Should the proposal to remove the eminence, which is topped by a monument to the Allegheny county soldiers who lost their lives in the Civil War, be approved, the material would be used to raise North Side streets now inundated by periodic floods.

PLAN AUDITORIUM

The removal of Monument Hill, according to the proposal advanced by Little, would provide 17½ acres on which could be constructed a municipal auditorium for conventions and concerts, such as has been erected in Cleveland and other cities.

The use of the material to fill the lower North Side streets would open the way for a $3,000,000 private construction program of warehouses and other buildings which already have been planned. The construction of these buildings is dependent upon the city's action to protect them from floods, Little said.

According to early uncompleted estimates, the total cost would be at least $500,000, although many engineers figure it would reach the million dollar mark. Little would like $500,000 for the project included in the bond issue which Council plans to discuss with Mayor Kline next week.

SEE SAVING

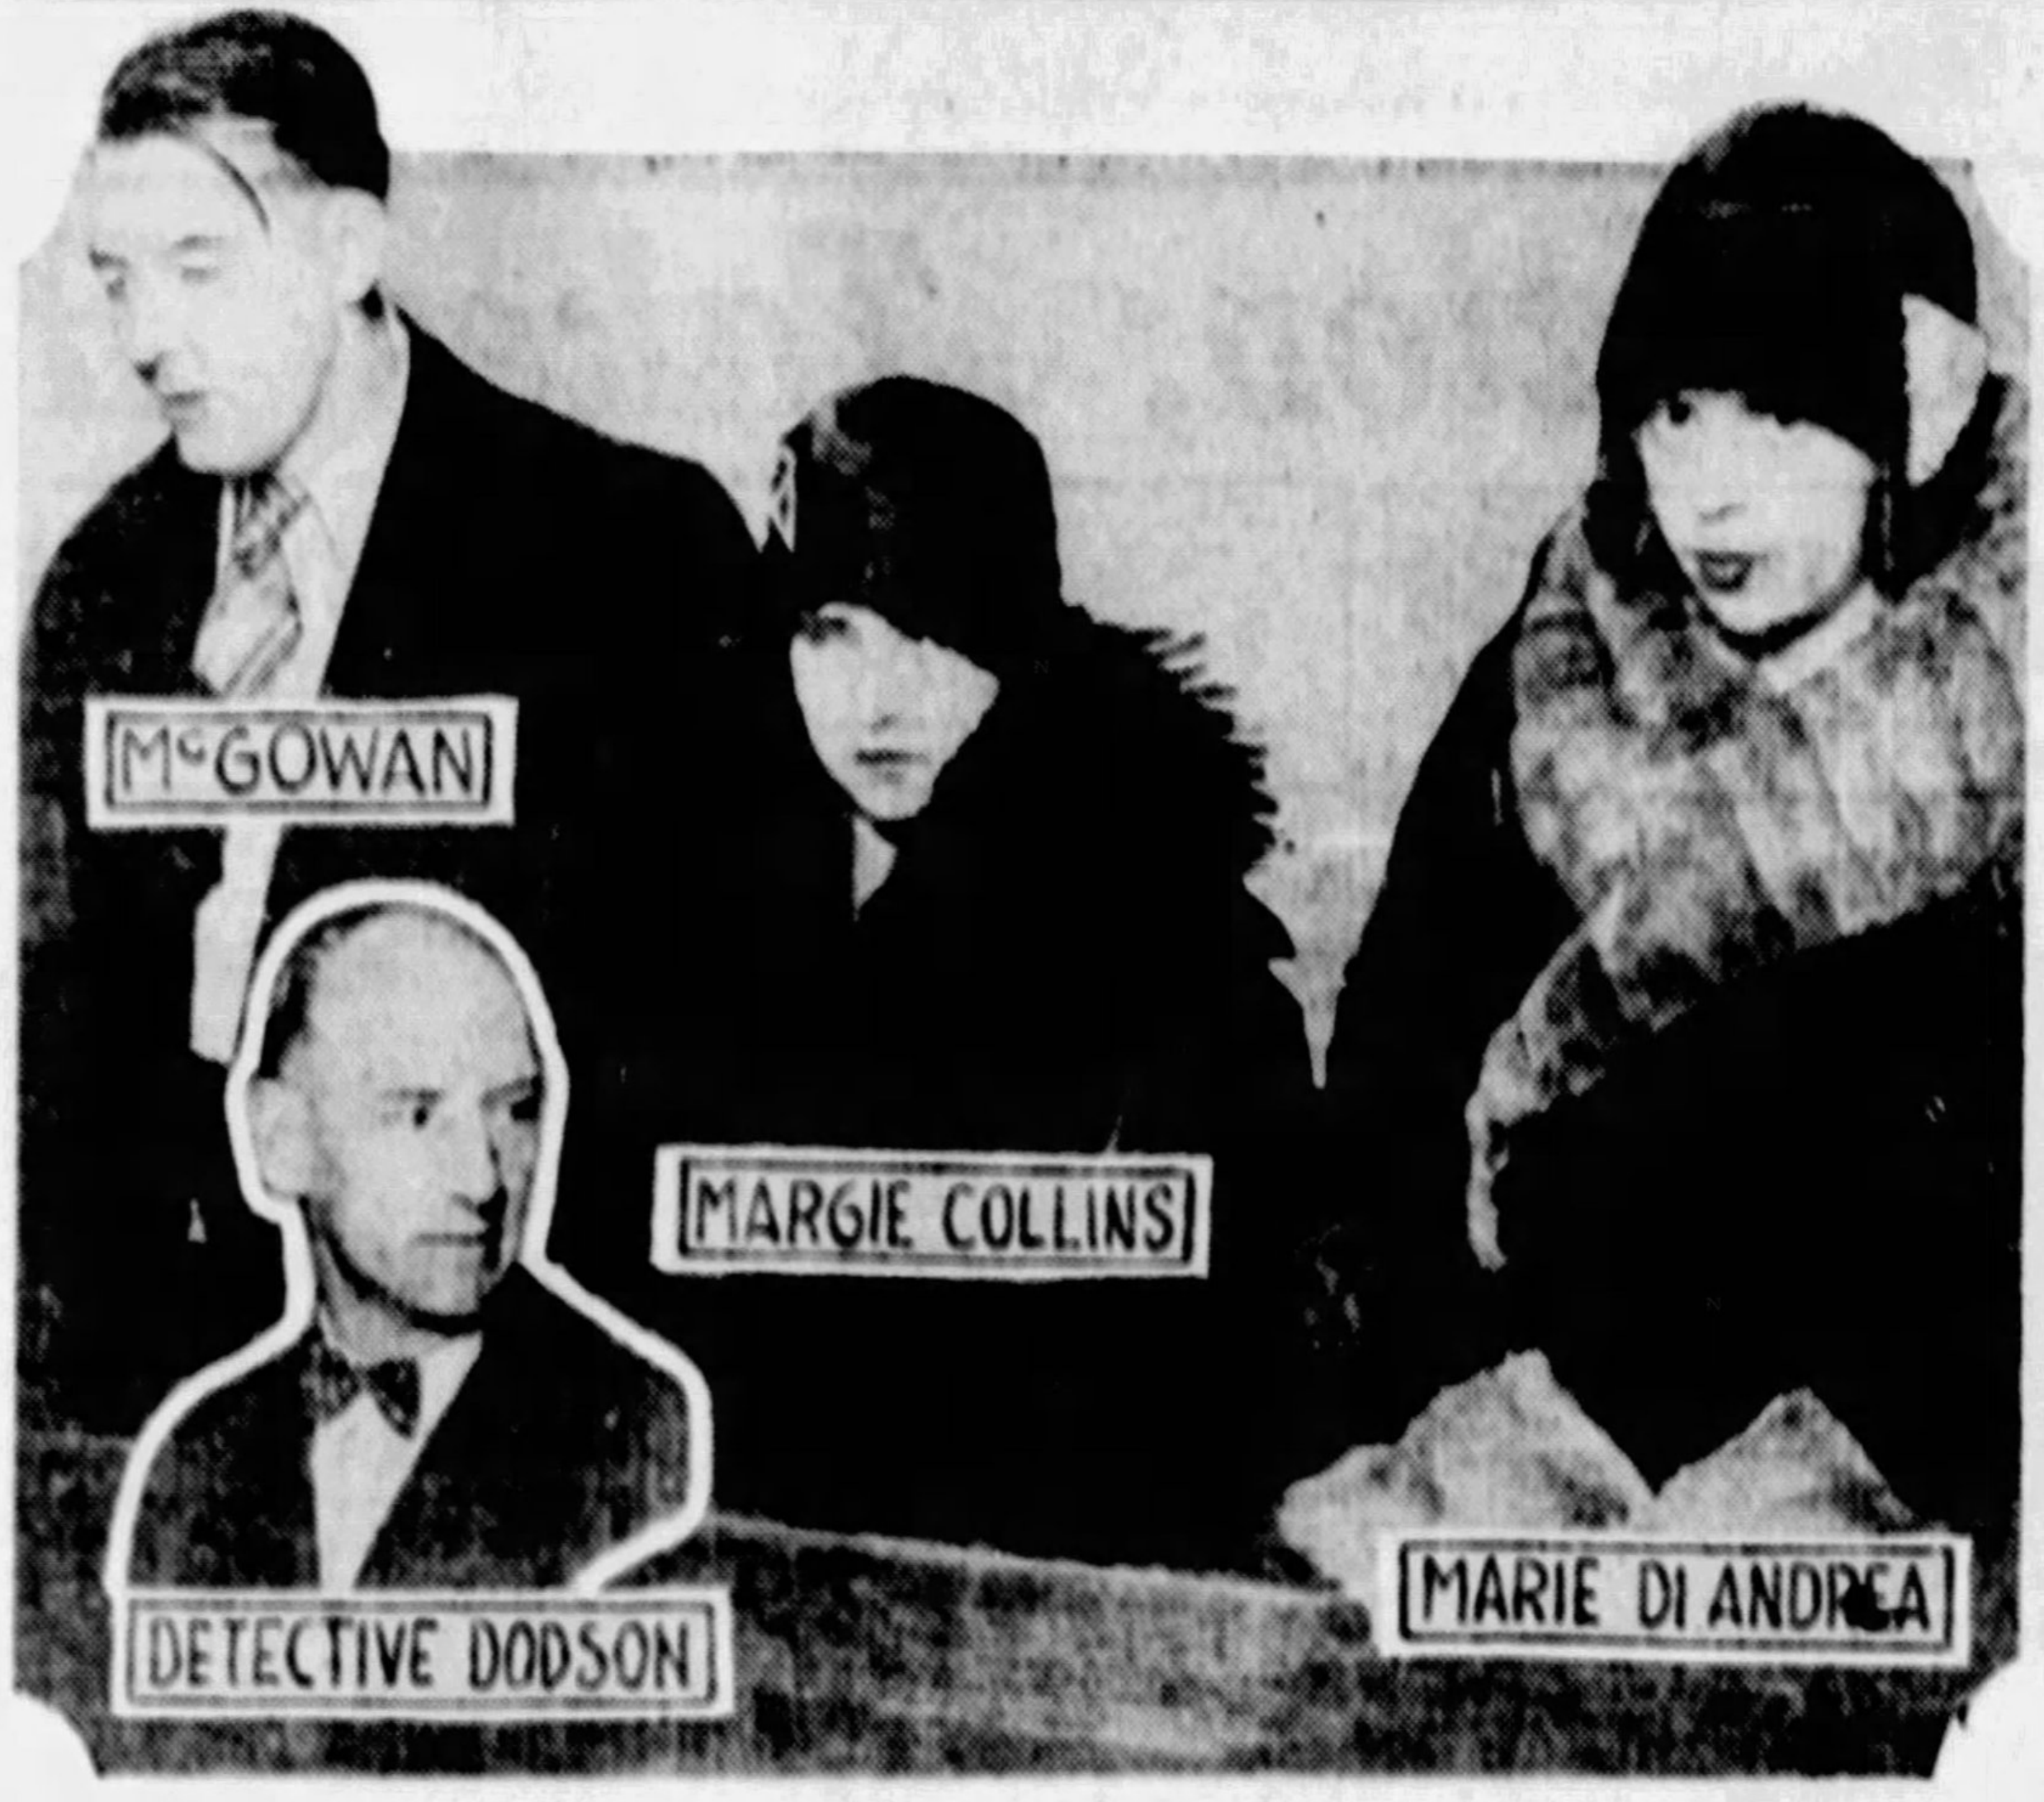
Monument Hill is bounded by Galveston and Ridge avenues and Reedsdale and Merchant streets. The highways to be raised, under present plans, are Robinson, Lacock, South, Balkan, Cremo, Corry and Scotland. Councilman Little expressed the opinion today that if these streets ever are to be raised it would pay the city to remove the hill in order to get filling material instead of using transported slag.

The monument on the top of the hill was dedicated on Decoration Day, 1871, as a memorial to the county's fallen heroes. It cost about $25,000. The central figure represents fame, with four lesser figures at the corner representing artillery, infantry, cavalry and navy. Gov. John W. Geary and Gen. George G. Meade of Gettysburg fame were among the speakers at the dedication.

SKULL IS FRACTURED DURING $6 HOLDUP

Beaten on the head by two white men who robbed him of $6 at Thirteenth and Market streets, McKeesport, last night, Henry Carter, 54, a Negro, of 112 Twelfth street, McKeesport, his skull believed fractured, is in a serious condition in the McKeesport hospital.

ARREST MURDERED MAN'S SWEETHEART



SWEETHEART TELLS OF JOHNNY DANIELS

Margie Collins, 23, of 916½ Federal street, "sweetheart" to the murdered Johnny Daniels, 23, asked him last Sunday, two days before he was shot in a moving auto in Liberty avenue, to protect her from threats made against her life. She offered to pay him $40 to guard her, Margie testified in Morals Court when she was held with Marie Di Andrea, 24, of the same address, and Rockwell McGowen, 28, of 116 Federal street, for further investigation. Picture taken as three were arraigned in court with Detective Frank Dodson beside them.

SLAIN WOMAN'S BODY FOUND

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Police turned to the haunts of "alky" peddler, today to solve the murder of the woman known as Mrs. Betty Chambers.

A maid found her body late yesterday in the Chambers' apartment, resting beneath a silken coverlet and supported by brightly-colored, blood-stained pillows. She was clad only in pajamas.

Death could have come to the 25-year-old woman by any one or all of three ways. Adhesive tape had been wound around her head, covering mouth and nose. She had been struck with a blunt instrument, evidenced from the scar on the back of her neck. A tightly drawn electric light cord was fastened about her neck.

Police pressed an intensive search for two men, "petty gangsters," they called them. One man, who registered with her at the apartment as Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Chambers, is connected with a group of gangsters, police said. Another man, Tony Miller, who was seen with Mrs. Chambers after she had quarreled with her husband, is believed to be connected with the "alky" racket.

A woman known as "Rosa," also the object of a search, was seen with Mrs. Chambers shortly after Chambers had left.

Dispelling the robbery motive, several costly pieces of wearing apparel, diamond rings, and some valuable fur pieces were found in the apartment.

Mrs. Florence Hauptman, living in an adjoining apartment, said she heard a commotion in the room yesterday morning. She told police she heard Mrs. Chambers say:

"Please don't do it."

"After that," she added, "all was still for a brief pause. Then I heard something fall."

The murder revealed the whereabouts of Mrs. Chambers to her father, Harry S. Lambsiedel, in Detroit. Two brothers also live there.

"She left home when she was 15 years old and nothing has been heard from her since," the father said.

President

E. C. NIED

E. C. Nied's election as president of the Business Men's Association of the East North Side, was announced today. The organization has endorsed the proposed McKees Rocks Bridge and the Pittsburgh and Ohio River boulevard, and is working for a bridge over the Allegheny River to East street. F. C. Bauer is first vice president; P. A. Freyvogel, second vice president; E. C. Hanna, secretary, and Wilfred S. Kuhl, treasurer.

ARREST TWO IN GANG MURDER

Arrested in connection with the death of John Nicklas, 60, a Syrian, of 24 Logan street, whose body was found in the Six-Mile Ferry road, Baldwin towship, yesterday, Fred Meggary, 27, of 1228 Webster avenue and George Acoty, 50, of 1896 Cliff street will be questioned today by county detectives. They were arrested last night by Detectives John Geisler, David Carlin and Michael McDermott, who say that the men were the last persons known to have been with the dead man.

POLICEMAN'S SHOTS HALT STORE ROBBER

Caught in the act, police say, of attempting to break into a confectionery store at Elm street and Wylie avenue early today, John Harris, 22, a Negro, of 1512 Bedford avenue, was chased by police and captured in an alley near Colwell and Pride streets. Patrolman Joseph Scanlon, who detected the man near the store, fired several shots before he finally caused the Negro to halt.

PITTSBURGHER WINS SUIT

A sweeping victory in three suits involving five patents—in which the J. F. Rowley Company of Chicago claimed an infringement of certain rights for the manufacture of artificial legs—has been won by Albert T. Rowley of 725 Liberty avenue, Pittsburgh.

The suits were brought against Rowley in the United States District Court at Cleveland, the case being heard before Judge Westenhaver, who decided that the patents claimed by F. J. Rowley for ankle joints are invalid. In the other suits the court ruled that the Pittsburgher is not infringing the patents of the Chicago concern. Albert T. Rowley of Pittsburgh was represented by Attorneys H. F. Stambaugh and Edward A. Lawrence.

Lily Is Invited to a Card Party at the Jetterson Home

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

LILLY LEXINGTON, spoiled daughter of the CYRUS LEXINGTONS, is engaged to marry STALEY DRUMMOND, a rich bachelor much older than herself. She is fond of him, but realizes she does not really love him the day after she accepts him, when she becomes instantly and violently infatuated with a taxicab driver whom she sees down town when she goes to meet her chum, SUE CAIN. Forgetting all about Sue, she jumps into his cab and he drives her home. She learns that his name is PAT FRANCE and that he owns his own cab in a company headed by his friend, ROY JETTERSON. He tells her that he is going to sell it to finance a piston ring that he has invented, and he and his cab vanish from the streets. Lily misses him terribly, and decides she cares too much for him to marry Staley Drummond. But Mrs. Lexington announces the engagement, and the date of the wedding is set for June tenth. Then, on May tenth, Mrs. Lexington hires a new chauffeur, and it is Pat France. Lily tells her mother how much she cares for Pat, and Mrs. Lexington humiliates him so that he leaves the house. Lily leaves with him, and the next day she marries him. Lily asked to clerk in the Frances' grocery, decides to leave Pat. They make up and she tries to make the best of her position.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

SHE changed the subject. "And you left me yesterday to go over to Jettersons' to see that Ertz girl!" she sobbed softly. "You still like her."

"I do like her," admitted Pat, who was sometimes too honest for his own good. "But that's nothing. . . . I'm in love with you, and you're the only woman in this world for me. Now get that into your cute little head, and stop acting like a baby!"

He kissed her again, and then he set to work to put the room to rights with the clumsy movements of a man. He unpacked the two bags, made the bed in some sort of fashion, and dusted the furniture with his pocket handkerchief.

And, sitting on the broad windowsill, with the sun in her hair, Lily watched him do it. "I must learn to do these things, darling," she said, idly, laying down the buffer she had been using on her finger nails, long enough to light a cigaret. "Really I must."

Pat looked at her, colorful as a June rose in the sunshine. She was like some lovely figure, carved out of ivory and painted with the most delicate tints imaginable. A creature of rose and cream and gold.

For a moment he was humble and helpless before all the beauty that he had married. The satin-soft, delicate beauty, like the beauty of a fresh gardenia laid in a box of cotton wool.

"I ought to be shot for taking you," he said, with a shake of his head. "I had about as much right to marry you as a slave would have to the Queen of Sheba." He laughed, but he meant it.

Lily laughed, too. "That's the proper frame of mind for you to be in—and see that you stay that way," she told him, lightly, but she meant it, too! "The best way to hold a husband, I reckon, is to keep your foot on his neck! And I'm going to keep you under my heel from now on!"

But when he was gone, she became deadly serious again.

"I'll never leave him," she thought, still tingling with the memory of his arms around her. "No matter how poor we are, I care for him too much—"

She looked down at the gingham apron she had put on before she began to pack her clothes, and wondered how many gingham aprons she would wear out before Pat was rich enough to afford a servant for her. . . . And then, as if the sight of the apron reminded her of them, she thought of her clothes in the scented closet at home on Montpelier road.

"It's just plain silly for me not to have them," she decided, and decided at the same instant to get them, by some hook or crook.

CHAPTER XXVII.

THE proud and fine thing to do was never to ask for the clothes, and Lily knew it.

They had been made for Staley Drummond's bride, as Mrs. Lexington had pointed out, and not for the wife of Pat France.

"Besides, I've asked for them once," thought Lily, standing beside the telephone in the narrow dark little hall of the house, "and I've been refused. I ought to have more pride than to beg for them again."

Then she began to think about them. She could see herself in the pink-and-white morning dress, in the dark blue chiffon over a scarlet slip with a blue-and-scarlet hat to match, in the grey-and-tourquoise taffeta silk. She closed her eyes, thinking how lovely she would look in those clothes that had been planned for young Mrs. Staley Drummond. Thinking how lovely she would be in Pat's eyes. Yes, she certainly must have them. Every single dress! Every piece of cobwebby lingerie! Every shoe and stocking and hat!

She gave the telephone number of the house on Montpelier road, hoping that Agnes would answer the call.

She did.

"Oh, 'tis Miss Lily!" she said. "And good to hear your voice again, it surely is. Your mother is out—"

"Goody!" Lily interrupted. "I was hoping she would be, Agnes. It's you I want to talk to. I want you to be very nice to me today."

"Of course, Miss Lily."

"I want you to pack up all my clothes for me and get them out of the house before my mother gets back, if you can," Lily went on, all sweetness, as she always was when she was asking a favor.

Before she finished the sentence she heard Agnes trying to say something. "What are you saying Agnes?" she asked.

Agnes told her again: "I couldn't do it, Miss Lily, even if your mother hadn't made me promise not to. Because the door of your room is locked and it's been locked ever since yesterday—"

"Oh, you can get it open!" Lily was impatient. "My mother has a key somewhere that will open every door in the house. Look in her dresser drawers, Agnes. Please!—Please for me!"

But the cook was stubborn. "I gave my word to Mrs. Lexington," was all she would say in answer to Lily's pleadings. "I gave my solemn word."

When Lily had hung up the receiver and stood looking at the mouthpiece of the telephone, it rang once more. "Maybe this is Agnes, changing her mind," she thought hopefully.

But it was not Agnes. It was Sadye Jetterson.

"You ran away so fast that I didn't have time to ask you something that I wanted to ask you," she began pleasant. "I want you to join my card club. It's just a bunch of girls—eight of us. Pat's married sister, Sarah, is one of the members and the rest are awfully nice. One of the members—a Mrs. Dudenck—has gone away to live, and we all thought maybe you'd take her place. I've just been talking to Sarah on the 'phone."

Pat's older sister, Sarah, had not been able to come to her brother's wedding because her children were all down with the measles and the house was quarantined.

"She won't be out of the woods for another week, so I thought we'd have the party a week from Wednesday," Sadye Jetterson's voice ran on. She had a very nice telephone voice.

"I'd love to come," fibbed Lily.

What she was thinking was that she might just as well get what fun there was in her new life. Her family and all her own friends had deserted her. Not a telephone message, not a telegram, not a wedding present had come to the small brown-shuttered house for her. She might have been dead for all her own world seemed to care these last two days!

"That will be just fine," Sadye answered heartily. "Don't fuss up for it. We wear just any old thing, and help the hostess get lunch, and so on."

"Any old day they don't dress for their parties!" Lily said scornfully to Pat that night when they went out for a walk under the warm, sweet darkness of the May night. "I'll bet they put on everything but the kitchen sink. Your friend Sadye, just hopes that I'll come, looking like a Zulu handcar, that's all! Women are terrible cats when they don't like each other, Pat, and she hates me!"

"Why should she hate you?"

"Because I married you—and she wanted The Ertz to get you," explained Lily, with great patience. "And then she's peeved because I had Sue at my wedding instead of her—"

She broke off, her voice becoming slow and dreamy. . . . She wondered what Sue and the rest of the crowd were doing tonight. Probably they were all at Staley's house, cheering him up and telling him that he was mighty lucky to escape right at the altar steps, as he had. She could imagine Jack Eastman's jokes.

She could imagine Sue's description of the wedding in the stuffy little parlor, with Mrs. France wiping her eyes, and Pat's father in an old-fashioned morning coat that was turning green at the seams.

"What are you sighing about?" Pat's voice asked. His eyes searched her face in the thick gray darkness. His arm went around her, pulling her close to him.

They were passing a little park, and he drew her into the shadows of the trees along the sidewalk. They stood there like lovers, holding each other close.

"Small and sweet," Pat whispered, his lips against her cheek. "Are you homesick? Do you miss all the things you left—and all the people?"

Lily nodded. "I miss my clothes," she answered. "Most of all—the pretty things I want to wear for you. But I miss the other things, too. Do you mind my telling you the truth? I love you better than things, Pat, anyway."

He nodded as if he understood just how she felt.

"Never you mind, Baby Doll." He had all sorts of tender, absurd nicknames for her those days. "When my piston ring gets on the market you'll have everything you want. We'll be as well-to-do as the Jettersons in no time."

"As well-to-do as the Jettersons—"

That phrase came back to Lily 10 days later, on the afternoon when Sadye gave her luncheon bridge for the card club.

For Sadye did all the work of the little party herself.

"Exactly as if she can't afford even a woman to come in for an extra day," Lily said to herself when Sadye greeted her at the door, resplendent in a dress of grass-green, silk trimmed with bugle beads that she called "Sphinx" beads.

She led her upstairs to the big airy front bedroom. "Don't put your coat on the bed," she said quickly, when Lily made a movement to toss the silk cape she had worn over the foot rail of the big double bed. "I've fixed it for Sarah's baby—and Jessie Newton's, if she brings hers."

Lily's big gray-green eyes widened between their silky dark lashes. "Babies?" she asked. "Babies—at a card party? I never heard of such a thing!"

Sadye shrugged her plump shoulders. "There wouldn't be any card club if the girls didn't bring them," she said simply. "These people can't afford nurses like the people you've been used to. Some of them hire little girls of 12 or 13 to come in after school, sometimes. But most of them have to bring the babies along. It's better for them, to, anyway. . . . I used to worry myself sick when Caddy and Taddy were little, if I left them for long."

"Caddy" and "Taddy" were the nicknames for Catherine and Theodore, the Jettersons' twins. Beautiful brown-eyed babies that looked as if some Italian painter had created them out of his imagination.

They ate their mashed potatoes and spinach in the kitchen while Sadye whipped cream for the desert and set coffee to boiling on the stove and poured salad dressing over head lettuce.

At half past one all the guests were there, and Lily sat next to Pat's sister, Sarah, who looked like Florence, except that she was 10 years older than Florence and more plump and not so smooth and rosy.

Her white linen waist and skirt were old-fashioned and dowdy, and she had no make-up on her face. Fine lines sprayed out from the corners of her eyes like tiny fans whenever she laughed, and she laughed very often.

"I want you to come to my house and spend the day just as soon as you can," she said warmly to Lily. "Bring your sewing." Her sewing! As if she could sew!

"Spending the day" seemed to be a special kind of entertainment in this new group. During the afternoon Lily heard two other women ask Sadye to come and spend the day with them. "And bring your sewing," they added.

She thought of her own mother carelessly asking people to come in for a cup of tea or for a formal dinner. She thought of Sue Cain asking people to come in "for a cocktail" on Sunday afternoons.

How far away it all seemed. The world of cocktails and tea with rum in it. The world of formal dinners that meant a sheaf of bills afterwards, or a family quarrel.

Lily looked up from a new hand of cards thoughtfully, and saw Elizabeth Ertz standing in the doorway.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

LILY never had a really good look at Elizabeth Ertz before.

And now, as she stood in the doorway only a few feet from her, she was surprised to see that she was much prettier than she had thought her.

The Wolfhound's Devotion to Her Puts Eleanor Lincoln in a New Predicament

"I AM a stranger in this section," Mr. "George Logan Jackson" (if one believed the highly improbable superscription on his visiting card) told me. "But I have letters of introduction from some people in New York to their friends out here. When I can find someone who knows us both, may I not call and tell you again how very sorry I am for the annoyance to which the dog has subjected you and your sisters?"

His hesitancy and the slightly upward inflection of his voice were a bit ludicrous. He was so patently in search of information as to our identity. But he also was so unmistakably a gentleman that I almost granted his unspoken, but unmistakable wish to toss aside the delay of hunting common acquaintances, and call upon us without that formality.

Almost, but not quite, and though the young man did not know it, the decision against him was caused by another admiring glance which I caught straying from his eyes to Mary's face. I've myself, I could temper the chill wind of strict conventionality, but I could not extend the hospitality of the home sheltering my husband's young niece to a man who did not have the proper social vouchers.

"I know very few people in this section," I said, trying to keep my voice from sounding as ungracious as my words. "But if you can find a mutual acquaintance I shall be charmed to have you call on us. I am Mrs. Graham, and we live about two miles down that road yonder. When you get to the schoolhouse inquire of anyone around there for the Graham farmhouse."

Noel Veritzen's glum face and smoldering eyes betrayed that he was anything but "charmed" at my invitation, but I caught a demure glint of interest in Mary's eyes which bolstered my decision to wait for vouchers for the personable youth who recognized my decision with an apparently grateful smile and a conventional "Thank you, so much," and then turned toward the dog, which had not moved from its position of adoring watchfulness at Eleanor Lincoln's feet.

"Come, Fedor!" he commanded.

The dog paid no attention to him whatever, and the young man repeated the command more sternly.

The dog turned his head ever so slightly, looked at the man, and then with the superb insolence which only a thoroughbred wolfhound or collie can achieve, turned back to his worship of the girl whom he had greeted so rapturously a few minutes before.

The man's face crimsoned—I fancied that he was not accustomed to disobedience in either human beings or animals—there was an unmistakable air of authority about him—and he thrust out his hand as if to grasp the animal's collar.

It was then that we witnessed as efficient an exhibition of presence of mind as I ever have seen. The dog, with almost unbelievable quickness turned his head and snapped at the outstretched hand, yet even as he did so, Miss Lincoln's hand snatched at his collar and her voice sounded reprovingly—"Fedor! Down!"

There was not a roseleaf's thickness to spare between those powerful fangs and the hand of the man who had been caring for Fedor. But it sufficed. He drew back his hand unscathed. But his eyes were blazing as he looked at the girl who just had saved his hand from being mangled.

"This is what comes," he began, but she struck in and finished his sentence with a rudeness unexplainable, except for some desperate need for silencing him.

"Of taking care of other people's dogs by anybody who is not wholly a dog worshiper," she said. "Fortunately, however, Fedor evidently has adopted me. I am sure he will obey me. If you will stand aside from the door, I will take him over to your car."

Hemorrhoids Disappear

All Pile Misery Banished Without Cutting or Salves.

External treatments seldom banish Piles for good reason that the cause is inside—bad circulation in affected parts, veins are flabby and bowel walls weakened.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation—send fresh, healthy blood to the raw, sensitive membranes. Internal treatment is one safe method. Ointments and other external treatments can't give lasting relief.

J. S. Leonhardt, M. D., a specialist, set out some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and it has proven successful in thousands of cases—and so successful that now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists under a money back guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at May Drug Co., who will promptly refund the purchase price if you are dissatisfied.

Sage Tea Turns Gray Hair Dark

By SHIRLEY BLAKE

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture. You can get this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for only 75 cents, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses Wyeth's Sage Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

FRANCE HONORS SAINT-GAUDENS

Word has been received that the French government has conferred on Homer Saint-Gaudens, director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute, the decoration of Chevalier of the Legion of Honor, in recognition of his services to the art world. Formal notification was received from Dr. A. Leteve, French consul in Pittsburgh.

Homer Saint-Gaudens is the son of Augustus Saint-Gaudens, one of the greatest of American sculptors. He was made assistant director of fine arts at Carnegie Institute in 1921, and director a year later. He has organized the last six international exhibitions, annually visiting the studios of European artists, and assembling the foreign paintings. He inaugurated the plan of showing these European paintings in other American cities at the close of the Pittsburgh exhibition. He is a director of the American Federation of Arts.

During the war Mr. Saint-Gaudens, as captain, was in command of the first camouflage company to be formed.

The town of Saint-Gaudens in France is soon to erect a monument as a memorial to Augustus Saint-Gaudens. In that town the father of the sculptor was born.

SIX ALIENS TO BE DEPORTED

William H. Marshall, government immigrant inspector in charge of the Pittsburgh district, last night left for New York with six aliens ordered deported by the Department of Labor for various offenses against the government. In the party was Tony Morino, an Italian, recently released from the Eastern Penitentiary of Pennsylvania, where he served three years and six months for burglary. He was subject to deportation because the offense had been committed within five years of his arrival in the United States. Another was John Facci, an Italian sailor, who had deserted his ship. The others were James Clark and Thomas Watkins, British subjects; Micha Bujdas, a native of Czecho-Slovakia, and Mile Mates, a Slav.

FRIDAY THE 13TH

BOSTON, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Superstition seems to hold no terrors for Roberto Roberti, Italian heavyweight boxer, who, tonight—Friday, the thirteenth—engages in the thirteenth fight of his current American invasion by tackling Monte Munn, here.

Old Rivals Renew Duel

By JESS CARVER.

THE varsity—teams of Pitt and Tech will meet today!

Fill in the blank space with any branch of collegiate sport, shake well and add two riotous cheering sections, a Kiltie and Pitt band and an admission ticket and you have a whale of an afternoon or evening's entertainment.

You also have a guaranteed thrill producer and you also have the makings, if things become too hot, of a first class riot.

Tonight, on the court of the Stadium pavilion, the basketball varsities of the rival institutions will clash for the thirty-second time, playing the first game of the annual three-game series. In 32 games played since the beginning of relations between the schools, the Panthers have come away with no less than 27 victories, and the Tartans have been forced to accept a meager five as their share. It has only been during the last few years, with the exception of 1911, that Tech has been able to beat Pitt at all.

Tonight's game, as far as records of both fives up to the present time go, looks to be a "sure shot" Pitt victory. The Panthers have probable the greatest floor team of college gender ever assembled in Pittsburgh. It is the best Pitt has ever boasted and looks to be far and away the superior of the Tech team.

The Tartans, who have lost all three games played, while Pitt has been winning seven in a row, knocking off the best in the country, are in a bad way for material. Even the craft of John Irwin, Plaid coach, seems unequal to the task of working the Skibos into a winning stride. Aside from Capt. White, there is only one other man on the squad who played at all regularly last year. That man is Crum. Hitchcock, who was being counted upon to add power to the attack, has not been available since the season opened, due to illness. Harpster and Stauffer, regulars last year, are not out for basketball this season. Amans and Hurd, the other regulars of last season, were lost by graduation.

Army-Navy War May Be Taken To Coolidge

WASHINGTON, Jan. 13.—(INS.)—The rift in athletic relations between the Naval Academy and West Point will be patched up, by appealing to President Coolidge, if necessary, to heal the breach, Representative Britten, Republican, of Illinois, member of the Naval Affairs Committee, predicted today.

"Congress will not permit the service academies to break off football relations," said Britten.

He declared he had learned that no member of the Big Ten football conference will book a game with West Point, and the existing contract between West Point and Notre Dame will not be renewed, he said, because of West Point's refusal to adhere to the three-year eligibility rule.

and had Dempsey almost licked until his own conceit proved suicidal.

The big question is as to how near Sharkey is to his best right now. He has not fought since Dempsey beat him last July, and in addition to the possible effects of his long idleness a point that can only be conjectured is the extent of the injuries he suffered from Dempsey's body punches. That's what keeps the dopesters guessing. On the whole, however, the chances appear to favor Sharkey tonight. He has such huge physical advantages and so great an edge in boxing skill that if he is within a reasonable distance of his top form he should be good enough to beat Heeney.

Charles Ellis.

THE widespread interest aroused by the Pittsburgh Three-Cushion Billiard League, of which E. Z. Wainwright is president and Charles Ellis secretary, now in the ninth week of its first season, emphasizes, its sponsors say, the fact that the future of billiards lies in the formation of local leagues rather than looking to the infrequent national championships of the amateurs and professionals at balkline, three-cushion and pocket billiards to maintain public attention.

E. Z. Wainwright.

Already there is talk of extending the local league season to include at least three more franchises, with perhaps four more players. And, based upon the success of the three-rail loop this season, a balk-line league on a handicap scale next winter is also a possibility.

The element of competition is what has put the league over with the fans.

Admitting that the class of play is not that of the Hoppes, Reiselts and Laytons, the follower of each local player has a personal interest in his favorite and turns out to root for him.

ON the other hand, the appearance of the topnotchers here is always in the nature of an exhibition, a fine spectacle but with nothing at stake. Thus the league has been favored with surprisingly good turnouts.

Assuming that the league would be hindered by a lack of interest on the part of some of the players far down in the standing as the schedule progressed, it was arranged to allow a substitute to play any time necessary.

However, with the season half over and the race bitterly contested, not one player has failed to appear for his game; not one game has been postponed.

The league matches have been free of all taint of betting, attracting admirers of the game who like to see it played for its own sake. Briefly, the league apparently has done more to advance the game of billiards here than anything ever attempted before.

ing were he to be kept there in future frays.

A fist fight between McCurry and Wasnie, in which several blows were aimed, but none struck, was an added feature in the second period.

Scott, a Bostonian, who has been working out with the Bucs recently in an effort to win a front line berth, did not get into the lineup.

THE Broadway Club of Beechview will attempt to hand the Duquesne Lafayettes, champions of the Allegheny County League, their first defeat of the season tonight when the two teams clash on the Broadway floor.

The game was originally scheduled to take place earlier in the season, but was postponed by mutual agreement. The Lafayettes have shown in their early games that they are in a class by themselves in the County League and if they show their customary form tonight they should retain their unblemished record.

A GROUP of local Duquesne University students, composed of Ed and Norm Steves, Kovelchick, Pratt and Czinki, will invade Brownsville on January 25 to meet the crack Pennsylvania Railroad Masked Five, one of the leading first-class teams operating in this section.

The Brownsville passers have defeated some of the strongest teams in their section so far this season, and are mapping out plans to engage the outstanding clubs in the Greater Pittsburgh district. The all-star team is composed of experienced passers and should give the Masked Five a strong battle.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

THE identity of the man whom Gene Tunney will have to meet next in defense of the world's heavyweight championship may become known tonight, when Jack Sharkey, the talkative tar from Boston, fights it out with Tom Heeney in a 15-round battle at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Gene Tunney.

The original dope was that tonight's winner would be sent against Jack Dempsey, the victor in that encounter to meet Tunney for the title, but now it is understood that the conqueror in the Sharkey-Heeney affair, at any rate if the winner happens to be Sharkey will be sent straight through against Tunney and that Dempsey will be paired with Jack Delaney in what can be billed as a battle between the hardest sockers in the big class.

EASTERN experts who are right on the scene admit that tonight's affair is one fight that has the wise boys looking dumb. They know that Heeney has improved impressively with each succeeding fight, and is on the whole a dangerous customer, yet they feel that he is not equal to Sharkey at the latter's best—as Jack was when he beat Harry Wills and Jim Maloney

BOSTON TAR IN TRIM FOR GO TONIGHT

By DAMON RUNYON,
Universal Service Staff Correspondent.

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Just a minute, thar, stranger!

Maybe I was a leetle too quick on the trigger in my guess at the result of the affair between the terrible Sharkey man and the Rock of Down under at Madison Square Garden tonight.

The reluctance that Sharkey has displayed about visiting our fair city and giving the boys a squint at him, has produced rumors that the loose-lipped Lith is not in the best of fighting condition. In that event I reserve the right to cancel all previous prognostications and take time out for a new book.

Thomas Heeney is not a fellow with whom you can get casual and careless. He hasn't looked any too well at his training, so my operatives report. But they have reference to his boxing, not his physical condition. He is pretty sure to be in good physical shape; and he is a rough and rugged citizen at his best.

Heeney is my idea of a pugilistic example of the persistancy of the uninspired. He lacks brilliancy, but he has plenty of perseverance.

The boys have made Sharkey a favorite, but there seems to be plenty of money on Heeney. The short-enders are taking a Long Island chance. They are depending on Sharkey to make enough mistakes, as he did with Dempsey, to let Thomas Heeney home in front.

Heydler Won't Investigate Hornsby Deal

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—No action will be taken by President John A. Heydler of the National League in regard to the trade of Rogers Hornsby to the Boston Braves by the New York Giants. Furthermore, President Heydler declared there was no foundation for reports that the Braves were the "junior varsity" of the Giants.

Big Rivals In Clash Tonight

JACK SHARKEY

TOUGH

And also a good boxer—that's Sharkey, the Boston contender for the heavyweight title, who fights Tom Heeney of Australia over the 12-round route in Madison Square Garden, New York, tonight, in Tex Rickard's latest elimination tournament.

SET PRICE ON ROG; REVENGE MOTIVE

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—W. S. Farnsworth, writing in the New York Evening Journal, says:

The "underworld" has been instructed to "get" Rogers Hornsby, who has been traded to the Boston Braves by the Giants in the most mysterious trade in the history of baseball.

A "price" that is reported to range between $10,000 and $25,000 is the prize for the gangster who does the "job." The man who is behind the "job"—the man who wants the great ballplayer either killed or so crippled that he never will be able to play again—is said to be one of the biggest bookmakers in the country.

This bookmaker's reason for desiring the destruction of Hornsby is to seek revenge for an alleged "welching" of wagers by the diamond star for an amount said to exceed $70,000.

Giant, Dodger, Phil Deal Is Rumored

NEW YORK, Jan. 13—(INS.)—In the wake of the deal that sent Rogers Hornsby to Boston for Frank Hogan and Jimmy Welsh, rumors were current here today that Brooklyn, Philadelphia and the New York Giants are planning a three-cornered deal. The players named by diamond gossip are Welsh, Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitching ace; Fresco Thompson, Philly second baseman, and Virgil Barnes and Fred Lindstrom of the Giants.

John McGraw, manager of the Giants, wants Thompson. He is said to have started negotiations before going to Havana. William F. Baker, owner of the Phillies, was in Brooklyn yesterday.

McGraw said in Havana that last year Brooklyn refused to give up Vance even for the great Hornsby. In view of this, it is not believed that the Robins would trade the strikeout king for any other player or players that New York or Philadelphia might offer.

"HOKUM," ROGERS SAYS

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—A reported plot to kill or cripple Rogers Hornsby, baseball star, for alleged "welching" of betting debts was characterized by Hornsby today as "hokum and propaganda."

ATTORNEY DEFENDS ROG

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Strong denial of charges that Rogers Hornsby was a welsher was made in long statement issued today by Hornsby's attorney, William F. Fahey, who took upon himself full responsibility for the gambling defense made in the recent suit of Frank Moore, Kentucky betting commissioner, to collect $92,000.

"The gamblers may be after him because of Moore and the gambler's code," Fahey said, "but the fact remains, in my opinion, that Hornsby is not only a great player and leader, but after a year's close contact with him, I have found him a real man in every respect."

The statement was authorized by Hornsby who signed it with Fahey.

SPEAKING OF SPORTS

by HARRY KECK SPORTS EDITOR

JACK SHARKEY vs. Tom Heeney, 12 rounds—the winner to box Gene Tunney next summer.

That's the treat before the New York boxing fans in Madison Square Garden tonight.

Sharkey is a sizable favorite to cop the honors, and he deserves to be, although this will be his first start in a little more than six months, or since he was knocked out by Jack Dempsey in the seventh round at the Yankee Stadium last July 2.

Meanwhile Heeney has been busy beating Paulino Uzcudun, although he was credited only with a draw, Johnny Risko and Jim Maloney.

Sharkey is far and away the best of the challengers for the heavyweight title when he is right.

Dempsey is passe. He has had two cracks at Gene Tunney, the champion, and failed. He was badly beaten at Philadelphia the night he lost the title, in September, 1926, and, a year later, at Chicago, he was outclassed except for a one-round flash in which he knocked down Tunney and came within a whisker of regaining the heights. He caught Tunney napping in the seventh round, when, seeming hopelessly beaten, he induced the latter to drop his caution for a moment and overwhelmed Gene with his only spurt of the fight. Once Tunney regained his bearings, however, there was nothing to the battle but a boxing sweep for Gene.

But for his asinine effort to outslug Dempsey, Sharkey would have beaten the former champion just as badly when they met. Sharkey is an excellent boxer for a heavyweight and speedy afoot. But, for some mysterious reason, he elected to drop his boxing skill and punch it out with the best punching heavyweight of modern times and was weakened and fouled before he passed out of the picture. As he was appealing to the referee about low punches he started to go down, with his hands already lowered, and Dempsey grazed his jaw with a left hook. It was a most peculiar ending and has given rise to whisperings that it was all pre-arranged with the end in view of letting Dempsey stand up for the "big shot" at Chicago in September, and Sharkey's reward to come in the form of a titular match with Tunney this year.

Sharkey certainly fought Dempsey the only way to make the latter look good, for Dempsey is at his best when his opponent mixes with him and at his worst when a foe boxes with him. For a moment late in the first round, Sharkey did move around and box and then he almost knocked out the slowed-down Dempsey. However, he went back to slugging in the second round and continued these tactics to the end. When it was all over he had the foul alibi to fall back on and it will be rehashed and ballyhooed to the skies when he meets Tunney during the coming season.

Opposed to Sharkey's really brilliant boxing, ruggedness, speed and hitting power tonight will be Heeney's dogged plodding. How Tom, although a really good fighter, can hope to overcome Sharkey in the latter's best form is beyond me.

Everything points to a certain Sharkey victory, with a Sharkey-Tunney fight following. And Tunney, a keener thinker, is good enough to beat Sailor Jack. In other words, there's no one in sight now who figures to defeat Tunney and Gene should rule on for quite a spell.

CAN JACK FORGET THIS DEFEAT?

Sharkey thought he was all set to cop the heavyweight championship until he ran into the great "comeback," Jack Dempsey, last summer, and was knocked out in the seventh round. It was a great slugfest, with Sharkey neglecting to take advantage of his superior boxing skill, until he wilted under body blows which he contended were foul and then went down as Dempsey hooked his left to the jaw. He hasn't boxed since and there have been rumors that he hasn't properly recovered from the body beating he took from Dempsey that night.

AUSTRALIAN HOPE

Heeney is the best foreign heavyweight to come to this country since Luis Firpo broke into the big money. Tom has done all that has been asked of him and promises to do more tonight, for he is on the short end of the betting in his bout with Sharkey.

FRAT HONORS GRIDDERS

The Phi Kappa fraternity of the University of Pittsburgh, with an informal dinner at the frat house last night, honored Bill Kern, Honey Guarino, Mike Getto and Ed Sherako, members of the Pitt football squad, which recently closed its season with the trip to California for the Tournament of Roses game with Pop Warner's Leland Stanford eleven. The Rev. Clarence Sanderbeck and Harry Keck and Charles J. Doyle of The Sun-Telegraph sports staff were among the speakers.

Banquet Plans Set

EVERYTHING, including the big football in which the newly elected captain is to be carried into the banquet hall after he is elected, is ready for the annual Pitt football banquet at the William Penn Hotel tomorrow night.

This year's fete is expected to be the biggest in history. With a championship eleven to toast, acknowledge Eastern champs and among the three or four in line for National honors, and with Bob Zuppke, veteran Illinois grid mentor as the main speaker, the success of the banquet is assured beforehand.

BUCS CHANGE LINEUP, SHOW CLASS IN WIN

By CARL W. SHATTO.

PITTSBURGH'S ice Pirates showed none of the qualities that won them the title of champions of big-heartedness as they played hosts to the Black Hawks of Chicago in a National League game at Duquesne Garden last night. Tossing aside the Santa Claus makeup they had worn in earlier frays, the Bucs enacted the Simon Legree role to perfection and walloped the Chicagoans by the ample count of 2 to 0.

Last night's victory marked the first time the locals have beaten the Hawks this season, and, for that matter, it was the first time the Corsairs had been known to take advantage of any club that was "on the rocks." The Chicagoans now are so deep in the cellar that the management will have to blast to get them out.

At that, the Pirates showed some kindness, for they administered the knockout wallop right at the start of the fight. The game was less than three minutes old when McCaffrey started a drive down center ice with Darragh in pursuit. As the stalwart defender neared the cage he drew the Chicago guardians out of position by angling to the boards, then passed to Darragh in front of the nets. Harold put a neat finish to a neat piece of work by slamming the puck past Gardiner for the initial score.

NEW NETS FELL GOALIE.

New nets, installed at the Garden only yesterday, played an indirect part in the tally. The new cages are decorated with a strip of mesh in the center. Gardiner, in lunging to block Darragh's shot, got his skate tangled up in this extra crochet work and fell just in time to avoid being hit with the flying disc.

McCaffrey added to his glory and to the Pirate lead in the second period when, with two minutes of play remaining, he tallied on a brilliant unassisted drive. Wresting the puck from a Chicago forward, Bert outwitted and outmaneuvered the Hawk defenders, skated in on top of Gardiner and let go a hot shot that the goalie had no chance to save.

Chicago's best scoring opportunity came in the third stanza when penalties left the Bucs with only four men on the ice. Led by Duke Keats, the Hawks showered Worters aplenty, but Roy was equal to the occasion and kept the Pirate cage inviolate by pulling off a series of sensational saves.

BUCS GREATLY IMPROVED.

In winning, the Pirates flashed the best brand of teamwork that they have shown this season. Almost every attack was of the combination variety and it was seldom that the play was broken up before a Pirate had treated himself to a hot shot. The team play of the reserve line—Cotton, Drury and White—was exceptionally effective. Cotton, who is showing the most improved form of any man on the club, was rewarded in the third period when he was placed in the "first string" line with Milks and Darragh. It would not be surpris-

CHILLY SAUCE

By CHILLY DOYLE

IT is all very fine and most appropriate for the writers and fans to wax eloquent over the hitting prowess of one Rogers Hornsby; yes, it is fitting to pay our respects to his fighting ability and other traits, but when those Eastern writers come out to sing the praises of Hornsby as a second-sacker it is time to temper the enthusiasm.

DID you ever see a bush league second baseman look as bad as Hornsby did on certain ground balls hit to his right in contests at Forbes Field? On at least two occasions last summer, Rajah made sorry attempts to get ordinary grounders that would have been apple pie a la mode for Hughey Critz.

MOREOVER, fans, did you ever see an infielder so completely bewildered on short lofts to the outfield as the kingpin hitter. Hornsby is so weak on a chance of this sort that other ball players discuss the shortcoming.

WHY, then, is he referred to as the "great second baseman?" Hornsby, you may recall, came to the Cardinals as a shortstop, but in this difficult role he was somewhat of a flop. Later he moved to the hot corner, and it is not giving Rajah the worst of it to state that he was no Pie Traynor. Eventually he was moved to the keystone sack, which position is not considered as tough as the other two.

NO, indeed, folks—Rajah is no Honus Wagner out around the diamond or as a base-runner—but, oh, how that fellow can hit! And, by the way, the Flying Dutchman was not what you would call a set-up at the plate. If Wagner and Larry Lajoie had been swinging at that "rabbit" ball the .400 circle would have been enhanced.

EVERY now and then some shortstop blazes into big league fame and we all begin to compare him with the Flying Dutchman. But after all is said and done, so far as the past 15 years are concerned, what shortfielder could you name as a real rival to the Carnegie wonder? The Bancrofts, Maranvilles, Wrights, Jacksons, Fletchers, Thevenows, Peckinpaughs, Scotts, Gerbers, Sewells, Barrys, are a great lot, but not one of them can get close to Wagner's all-around ability.

LOUGHRAN, MANAGER SIGN LONG CONTRACT

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 13.—(INS.)—Tommy Loughran, light-heavyweight champion of the world, and Joe Smith, his diminutive manager, have signed a new five-year contract. Forgetting that his contract expired almost two years ago, Smith signed with Tex Rickard the other day for Tommy to fight for the New York promoter only until 1928, but the New York Commission called his attention to the fact that his contract with Tommy had expired. Despite their assertions that no contract was necessary, the champion and his manager acceded to the commission's wish and had another one drawn up and signed.

WALTER MUELLER IS REINSTATED

Walter (Heinie) Mueller, former outfielder of the Pirates, who has been on the retired list of the local club, has just been reinstated by Judge Landis, according to a notice received by President Dreyfuss yesterday from the baseball commissioner.

Mueller was a member of the club on two different occasions. Twice he retired voluntarily. Walter and his brother are in the haulage and drayage business in St. Louis, their home town. As the athlete is still under 30 he is capable of playing regularly.

Shows Price Cutting Not Cutting Auto Friendships

By B. C. FORBES

PRICE CUTTING in the automobile industry hasn't cut friendships. The keenest of competitors usually are the closest of friends. I have noted many little incidents proving this.

A. P. SLOAN, Jr., head of General Motors, on seeing Henry and Edsel Ford present at the annual automobile dinner in New York, immediately walked over to them, and very cordial greetings were exchanged. Mr. Ford's presence was itself a token of the prevailing spirit of friendliness throughout the industry, for this was the first time in more than a dozen years that he had foregathered with other automobile leaders at their association banquet.

IT would be hard to find three more competitive car manufacturers than John N. Willys, Walter P. Chrysler, and A. R. Erskine of Studebaker. Yet these three sat together, probably from choice, and it was apparent that they enjoyed one another's company. Mr. Chrysler succeeded in forging ahead of these rivals last year and rose to third place in the industry. This year both Willys-Overland and Studebaker are hopeful of giving Walter Chrysler a swift race for the coveted head of the list of so-called Independents. General Motors and Ford admittedly will lead all others.

NEXT to Mr. Willy's sat Alvan Macauley, President of Packard, while only one seat away from Mr. Erskine was Mr. Sloan. Others at the long table included such well-known automobile giants as Roy D. Chapin (who presided), Lawrence P. Fisher, Walter C. White, Robert C. Graham, F. J. Haynes, Charles D. Hastings, Col. Charles Clifton, Alfred H. Swayne, R. E. Olds, Charles W. Nash, H. H. Rice, William E. Metzger, and A. J. Brosseau.

W. C. DURANT was missed this year. Notwithstanding his checkered career, now up, now down, he is very cordially liked by many motor men. He is sometimes called "The daddy of the industry." This true anecdote may help you to understand why Durant is popular:

One of his competitors, a personal friend, once telephoned Durant that he was in a very awkward fix. He explained that he had gone heavily short of General Motors, then headed by Durant, and that the market had gone so strongly against him that he faced terrible losses.

"You were a fool to sell my stock short", Durant chided. But he immediately added: "Come up and see me and I'll help you out. You don't need to worry."

Then his friendly rival laughed loudly and explained that he had only been joking, but he was glad he had done it because it had proved to him that Durant's heart was in the right place.

GOSSIP in the industry is that Ford may raise his prices if other manufacturers of low-priced cars would follow his example.

The view generally taken by automobile men themselves is that total sales of automobiles this year will be unusually large, but grave doubts are expressed as to whether most companies will be able to show satisfactory net profits.

"It looks like profitless prosperity for the industry this year," the president of one company declared seriously.

ALL reports are that orders have been placed in very encouraging numbers since the automobile show opened. Richard H. Grant, general sales manager of Chevrolet, told me that 60,000 of their new models were ordered in the first two days of their showing, probably a new record for the industry. President William S. Knudsen of Chevrolet admitted that already he has had to give instructions this week to step-up production beyond former calculations.

INVESTORS and speculators may be interested to know that most automobile leaders are not predicting any boom in motor stocks. The view generally expressed is: "We confidently expect to do a very big business, but we are not sure yet how much money we will be able to make for our stockholders, seeing that prices, quality considered, are lower than ever before."

A distinctly pessimistic view is expressed concerning the outlook for some of the smaller companies that are merely assemblers and who, the trade declares, have no solid economic reason for their existence.

Yet Chrysler, at the start, was looked upon as only a small, unimportant factor; but see what this company has achieved.

Showing that you never can tell.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened barely steady today at a decline of 6 to 14 points, and soon showed net losses of 25 to 33 points on active months under liquidation and local selling inspired by a sharper falling off in domestic consumption for December than anticipated.

Selling was active but the decline to 18.85c for March and 18.95c for May brought in trade buying which absorbed offerings and led to rallies of 10 or 12 points from the lowest before the end of the first hour.

The report of the Census Bureau showed consumption in this country of 543,598 bales for December, exclusive of linters, compared with 625,650 for November and 607,966 for December last year.

The market was less active later. Losses of 10 or 12 points from the early decline met some further liquidation, which caused rather irregular fluctuations, but there was enough buying on the setbacks to give the market a fairly steady undertone. Prices at midday were holding around 18.97c for March and 19.07c for May, or about 20 to 22 points net lower on the active positions.

LEWISBURG, Pa., Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Bucknell University has adopted boxing as an intercollegiate sport, it was announced today by John Plant, director of physical education. The first call for candidates was issued today and 20 responded. If talent is developed at inter-class tourneys, meets with other colleges will be arranged.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

Tickers Down at Opening.

The ticker system over which the New York Stock Exchange quotations are distributed in this district was out of commission for exactly one hour this morning, from 10 to 11 o'clock. A crippled generator was given as the cause of the suspension. As 10 o'clock is the opening hour of the exchange traders throughout the district waited anxiously for figures on the various securities. Most of the brokerage houses brought their private wires into play and secured enough "quotes" through that medium to convey some idea of what the market was doing. Scattered quotations by private wire and long distance telephone disclosed a fairly strong market with the industrial leaders fighting their way forward under the leadership of General Motors, Steel Common and miscellaneous specialties. The 60-minute delay in getting into operation was one of the longest ever experienced here. The New York Curb tickers were not affected.

Standard San. Split Approved.

Stockholders of the Standard Sanitary Manufacturing Company have approved the proposed capital readjustment calling for a change in the par value of the common shares from $25 to no-par and the issuance of three shares of new no-par stock for each of the $25 par shares. There is at present outstanding $26,864,000 of the $25-par common stock. Total authorized common is $33,000,000. The $25-par common is on the $5 annual dividend basis. While there has been nothing official to indicate what rate will be paid on the new no-par shares, the general opinion in the Street is that disbursements will be inaugurated on a $2 annual basis, or the equivalent of $6 a year on the old common.

Cotton Consumption Report.

The census bureau reports there were consumed in December 543,598 bales of cotton exclusive of linters, against 625,650 in the previous month, and 607,966 bales in December, 1926. Cotton on hand in consuming establishments December 31, was 1,707,324 bales, against 1,551,536 a month ago, and 1,762,729 on December 1, 1926. The falling off in December consumption was greater than the trade had been looking for and early in the day the cotton market declined sharply under heavy liquidation. Prices declined $1.25 per bale from the close of Thursday. The May option declined to below the 19 cent level, but at this price met some resistance through trade buying.

Rubber Imports Expand.

Importations of crude rubber into the United States in 1927 were 432,314 long tons, against 411,962 tons in 1926, the Rubber Association of America reports. December imports were 29,862 tons, against 48,541 in November and 32,963 in December, 1926. Largest monthly imports were in April, 45,672 tons.

U. P. Equipment Expenditures.

The Union Pacific will spend $5,000,000 for equipment, including 22 Pacific type locomotives, 500 steel underframe flat cars, six gas-electric passenger cars, eight mail and baggage trailers, 15 all steel passenger coaches and 10 all steel dining cars.

Nor. Pac. to Spend $51,500,000.

The Northern Pacific Railway will spend more than $54,500,000 in 1928 for maintenance, roadway and building improvements and completion of two important branch line projects.

Pipe Lines Carry More Oil.

Deliveries of oil by 11 pipe lines in the Standard Oil group during 1927 amounted to 192,214,976 barrels, an increase of 14,793,947 barrels over 1926.

West Buying Copper.

Buying of copper during the week has been well distributed between rolling mills and brass manufacturers. More than the usual proportion was absorbed by Middle Western consumers, reflecting greater activity in automobile lines, especially Ford. Indications are that one-half of February requirements of copper have been purchased and from 10 to 20 per cent of those for March. Most sellers continue to quote the Eastern market at 14.12½ cents, delivered, and the Middle West at 14.25 cents. Weaker London cables have resulted in several offerings through irregular channels at slight concessions.

Liggett Sales Show Gain.

Louis K. Liggett Co. 1927 sales were $58,456,724, against $53,354,140 in 1926.

The Philadelphia Company and affiliated corporations report for the 12 months ended November 30:

N. Y. Life Sets Record.

The New York Life Insurance Company has announced that its total of new business paid-for in 1927, exclusive of dividend and all other additions, was $927,000,000. This is the largest record of new business secured in any year in the company's history of 83 years, and is $27,000,000 in excess of the total new business in 1926. The total amount of insurance in force on December 31 was $6,265,000,000.

Brokers' Loans Increase.

Loans to brokers totaled $3,819,573 on January 11, an increase of $9,550,000 over January 4, and a new high record, the Federal Reserve Board announced. The low for 1927 was $2,718,631,000, made on December 28, and the high for 1926 was $3,115,125,000, on January 26.

Reserve Rates Higher.

The Federal Reserve system ratio this week is 70.7 per cent, against 67.2 a week ago and 75.4 per cent a year ago. New York ratio is 75.1 per cent, against 64.9 last week and 81.9 per cent last year.

Seminole Decline Continues.

The Seminole area for 24 hours ended at 7 a. m. Thursday produced 342,631 barrels against 346,295 Wednesday, and a peak of 527,400 on July 31.

Sugar Consumption Lower.

Consumption of refined sugar in the United States in 1927 was 5,297,050 tons, a decrease of 6.60 per cent from the 1926 record consumption of 5,671,335 tons, according to Willet & Gray.

November Railroad Earnings.

Earnings of 183 Class 1 railroads including 15 switching and terminal companies, as reported to the Interstate Commerce Commission for November and 11 months, compare as follows:

	1927	1926
Nov. gross	$ 502,819,880	$ 562,255,815
Net op. inc.	86,424,299	114,940,891
11 mos. gross	5,739,426,787	5,937,661,741
Net op. inc.	1,028,326,619	1,152,872,689

Anaconda Moves Upward.

Anaconda advanced in the wake of another uprush in Green Cananea, which reached levels representing a recovery of about 20 points from its recent low of 124. Engineering reports are growing increasingly optimistic about the ore discoveries on the Greene properties. Market appreciation of Anaconda's important holdings of Greene Cananea have greatly strengthened the asset position of the Anaconda shares. Interests prominent in the mining world estimate the value of Anaconda's cash, liquid assets and security holdings at $70 a share on Anaconda's 1,500,000 shares, without taking into consideration its mining properties and other assets.

A. M. Byers Earnings.

A. M. Byers Company and subsidiaries for the year ended September 30, showed net of $1,377,237 after depreciation, interest, Federal taxes, etc., equal to $4.14 a share on 199,349 common shares against $1,465,675, or $7.71 a share on 159,050 outstanding shares at the end of the preceding year.

Atterbury Sees Loadings Drop.

W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, speaking before the Midwest shippers' advisory board at Chicago, predicted a decline of 2.5 per cent in freight loadings in the Middle Western territory, and 2.7 per cent in the country as a whole, in the first quarter of this year, and an upward revision of freight rates. Mr. Atterbury also warned against overdoing the hand-to-mouth buying policy.

Expect C. & O. Decision Soon.

With the Interstate Commerce Commission docket cleared of all important decisions, except the Van Sweringen plan to Merge Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette and Erie railroads into an Eastern trunk line, opinion is current in official circles at Washington that a ruling will be made on the proposal soon.

Wabash Preferred Retirement.

Reports are current in financial circles that the Wabash Railway is considering the issuance of approximately $70,000,000 of 5 per cent bonds for the purpose of retiring the preferred stock.

Royal Baking Omits Extra.

Royal Baking Powder Company omitted the extra dividend of 2 per cent usually declared at this time in former years. A statement to stockholders said although operating income for 1927 exceeded that of 1926, it was deemed wise to conserve cash for possible future expansion.

Estimating G. M. O. Earnings.

On the basis of the prediction of Alfred P. Sloan Jr., president, that the current quarter would be the biggest first quarter in the history of General Motors in both sales and profits, it is estimated shipments to dealers for the three months will exceed 400,000 cars and trucks and net income after all charges will be upwards of $55,000,000, or $3.00 a share on the [illegible] shares of common.

Call Remaining French 8s.

J. P. Morgan and Co., as sinking fund trustees have issued a call for redemption on March 15, 1928, at 110, of the remaining French Government 25-year 8 per cent external gold loan outstanding. The amount of about $10,000,000.

Net income for year 1927 was $710,452, or $4.92 on common, against $793,192, or $5.34 a share in 1926. This is the first of the large steel companies to report for the year 1927.

RAILS ASSUME LEADERSHIP FOR RISE

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Rails superseded the industrials as leaders of the upward price movement in today's stock market. Operators for the rise succeeded in marking up a number of industrial specialties 3 to 6 points in the early trading, but they made little headway among the standard issues, whereupon speculative attention was diverted to the rails which moved forward in impressive fashion. Trading, which had been rather dull during the morning, picked up measurably in the early afternoon.

Banks called about $5,000,000 in loans, but there was a plentiful supply of call funds available at the renewal figure of 4 per cent. The further increase in brokers' loans reported by the New York Federal Reserve Bank apparently was disregarded as a market influence. The weekly mercantile reviews characterized business as fair, stressing the improvement shown in some of the country's major industries.

Canadian Pacific was the leader in the railroad group, quickly moving up 5 points. "Nickel Plate" common recorded a similar gain and Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Pittsburgh and West Virginia, New York Central, Delaware and Hudson, Frisco common and Lehigh Valley moved up 2 to 4 points. Others advanced a point or two.

U. S. Steel common and General Motors fluctuated within a rather narrow range. Good buying was noted, however, in such specialties as Montana Power, Warren Bros., Wright Aeronautical, Commercial Solvents, Purity Baking B and Greene Cananea.

Stock Moves Upward On Steady Buying

A good demand for Carnegie Metals made its appearance at the opening of the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange today marking a resumption of activity in the shares following a period of quiet which had prevailed since last Monday. Several hundred shares were handled on the initial trading spurt and it was thought likely another forward movement similar to that at the end of last week was in the making.

The uprush in the shares last Saturday, carrying the price to the record high of $22 a share attracted a fairly heavy volume of liquidation with the result that the price dropped back about three points early this week. However, there was no change in the general conditions affecting the company and it was thought that a considerable proportion of the stock purchased over the past few months was still intact.

CHICAGO BOARD

CHICAGO, Jan. 13.—(AP.)—Helped by upturns in Liverpool quotations and by evidence of good export business from North America, the Chicago wheat market scored an early advance today. The advance was in the face of an increased estimate of the Argentine exportable wheat surplus. Opening at ⅛ to ⅝c gain, Chicago wheat continued to mount. Corn, oats and provisions also developed strength, corn starting ⅛ to ⅜c higher and then reacting a little, but afterward rising higher than before.

At noon wheat was ⅝c to 1⅛c net higher and corn at ⅛c decline to ⅝c advance.

Emphasizing indications today of European demand for wheat from North America were reports that Argentine shipments has been somewhat smaller than looked for and that Australian exports were reduced as compared with last week. Meanwhile, however, Argentine port stocks of wheat were said to have increased and a final authoritative but unofficial estimate of the Argentine new crop wheat exportable surplus made the total 171,000,000 bushels, an increase of 6,000,000 bushels over the latest previous figures.

Numerous advices indicating that the domestic corn crop has been overestimated and that feeders are buying freely, did much to lift the corn market today at times. One report at hand said practically all stations in Minnesota that as a rule supply millions of bushels of corn to the Minneapolis market are buyers now and that later the situation will become even more acute. At the same time, export corn prices today were higher, and Omaha was selling corn at prices well above a Chicago parity.

HARTFORD SPOKE OF A PLAN TO OFFER A VERY LARGE REWARD AND....
I'LL GET THAT MAN BACK HERE WITHOUT SPENDING A NICKEL. THE IDEA CAME TO ME IN A FLASH THIS MORNING WHILE YOUR FATHER WAS BRAGGING ABOUT HOW MANY PERSONS WERE ANXIOUS TO SHAKE THE HAND SUPPOSED TO HAVE PUSHED HERMAN LAMB INTO THE RIVER.
MY STARS! IF THE POLICE FAILED TO FIND HERMAN LAMB HOW DO YOU EXPECT TO....?
PEGGY, I DON'T WANT TO GIVE YOU A SHORT ANSWER BUT THAT'S A SECRET. AND DON'T SAY ONE WORD ABOUT IT TO YOUR FATHER EITHER OR HE'D BE OUT AT DAYBREAK TELLING THE WORLD ABOUT IT.
WELL MOTHER I JUST CAN'T IMAGINE HOW YOU THINK YOU'LL DO IT.
HAVE YOU BEEN GOING TO FORTUNE TELLERS AGAIN?

By MARCELINE d'ALROY

ON "THE ETERNAL TEMPTRESS"

FAME is a lovely LADY,
Always just AHEAD of us.
She must be a lady for
She is so UNCERTAIN. And Like an alluring TEMPTRESS
She never fails to turn
And SMILE seductively over
Her SHOULDER the moment we Contemplate CEASING to Chase her.
Ah! that SMILE, and those Tantalizing GLIMPSES she Shows of the TREASURES
That will be ours when we Have WON her finally! Oh,
Fame, what a WITCH you are!
Great men can MEET you,
Acknowledge you and Yet RETAIN their Heads; but
You are no great FRIEND
To WOMEN.
You fill their MINDS with So many seductive THOUGHTS
Of your POWER that they Forget they have HEARTS
To look after, TOO.
You may be a LOVELY LADY
But you are not always WORTH your PRICE!

BUGS BAER Says

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

VINCENT ASTOR, who is related closely to the dollars of that name, is now the owner of the largest yacht in the world.

Everybody wants to own a yacht some day, or even less, but few people ever live to see their hopes stop creeping.

The Astors made their certified gravy in Wall street, an avenue which runs from the East to the Hudson Rivers.

And you can have your choice of Rivers. A broker once jacked us into investing 11 bouncing dollars in a stock. It was Peruvian Bark, Limited. And after the top started swamping the margin, no Peruvian ever equaled our bark, unlimited.

That broker told us to keep pyramiding the profits and we would wind up on a big yacht like Astor's.

But he forgot to tell us we would be a deckhand on it.

We're not jealous of Vincent's monogramed scow. He even offered us his old one. But there is not enough water in our cellar to float it.

Quite a few of the expert grabbers of Wall street own yachts. But their luxury depends on a narrow slice of ticker tape which issues from a queer machine that laughs and sobs without a sound.

The first one, when hoisted, means, "Owner Aboard."

The second one is flown upside down, and on mournful dates like last Thursday, it means "Owner Overboard."

While Astor's salty bungalow will be an American vessel it will be a private navy. It will be delivered on time because Vince was too smart to wait for Congress to O. K. his building program, and the Astor valet hasn't enough votes to start a filibuster.

An admiral's uniform goes with the yacht and Vincent will have to be many miles out at sea before folks will stop thinking he is an usher in a movie.

In the meantime, we will get ready to embark on the winter cruise of the Staten Island ferry. Five months among the semitropical islands of the upper bay. Reservations now booking.

Real War on Crime Ring Promised in Co-operation

War on the crime ring has been declared in terms that warrant assumption that there will be a "clean-up." District Attorney Gardner has announced that the forces of the county will co-operate with those of the Federal government, represented in the offices of John D. Meyer, Federal district attorney, and John D. Pennington, prohibition administrator.

Simultaneously, James M. Clark, public safety director, orders booze dives and gambling dens in the Hill district to be closed by the police—to stay closed. With all arms of law enforcement active and co-operating there is promise of an effective brake on white slavery, bootlegging, speak-easies, dope-peddling, gambling and vice in general, which traffic is the basis of gang rivalries that have resulted in a reign of terror and murder.

This is commendable activity, giving the public assurance that extraordinary means are being resorted to in dealing with conditions of extreme gravity. The tone of the law enforcement agencies is such as to imply thorough and far-reaching operations. That 's what is needed, not only at times like the present, but at all times. It is easier for an active power to keep crime in check than it is to halt it after it has been permitted to run wild.

Lower Electric Rates Point to Big Possibilities

The Duquesne Light Company announces a new schedule of rates, effective February 1, providing for a reduction to many users of current. Sixty per cent of the domestic users will have decreased rates, and the same benefit will apply to 50 per cent of retail patrons and 30 per cent of wholesale customers, while the rate of no patron is to be increased. The implication is that users of current whose present rate is not affected already are receiving the benefit.

The claim of the company that its rates are among the lowest in the country calls attention to the fact that Pittsburgh is a logical electric center. The power of coal, transformed to electric power, is available here to such an extent that the surrounding territory should be the home of many diversified industries.

All of the essential equipment for the electrification of industries are manufactured here and the potential power to operate them lies unused in the mines of our surrounding hills. Some day the industrial world will awake to the economic possibilities contained in the proximity of mines to power plants. And Pittsburgh will profit thereby.

To Place Flag on Seven Seas, Pass the Jones Bill

The country, and we hope Congress, will be behind the Jones bill for the American merchant marine, now favorably reported by the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

All of us believe that we should have a merchant marine under the American flag, carrying at least 50 per cent of our exports and imports. Today only 30 per cent of them are carried under the Stars and Stripes.

We have waited many years, and offered many sacrifices, in the interests of private shipping companies, to induce them to build and operate ships under the flag.

We have tried to sell them shipping board vessels for a tenth of what they cost. The Shipping Board, without takers, has offered to lend the money for construction cost of private-owned ships at low rates of interest. In vain.

Senator Jones and his colleagues on the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee say that it is dangerous to wait longer for private initiative to supply the need. The government-owned vessels now being operated by private lines under contract, and by the government's merchant fleet corporation itself, are becoming obsolete. They were built 10 years ago or more. Some of them must be replaced. Some of them must be modernized.

The Jones bill authorizes the Shipping Board to recondition and improve merchant vessels now owned by the United States. The board is also authorized and directed to present to Congress, from time to time, recommendations for building the new vessels required. It is said that the Shipping Board program calls for the expenditure of $200,000,000 over a period of years.

In particular, the government-operated United States Lines want sister ships to the Leviathan, so that together they can maintain a weekly service to channel ports, equal to the best in the world. General Dalton, who operates the Leviathan and its present inferior companion ships under the title of United States Lines, last year made a profit of three million dollars for the year.

It is true that last year the Shipping Board cost the government thirteen million dollars. But this aid kept two hundred and eighty-seven ships in operation, maintaining services on thirty-seven trade routes all over the world. It is a form of subsidy, but one justified by the magnitude of the interests involved.

Without expense we are not going to attain on the seas a position of sufficient commercial power and national safety. It will mean the spending of money to complete our Navy and to subsidize our merchant marine—just as, in the early stages, we had to subsidize our industries by protective tariff and subsidize our railroads by land and money grants.

The determination of Congress to put our merchant marine upon an enduring basis is evidence that we are thinking in terms of an American transportation system that does not terminate at our shores, but extends throughout the world, as far as our commerce and our interests extend.

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Comets' Tails

A MASSACHUSETTS reader, associate member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, wishes to know what I think of a theory of his that the tails of comets are merely "luminous shadows" of the comets.

A "luminous shadow" must be taken in a similar nonsensical sense to that which gives at least poetic meaning to Milton's "no light but rather darkness visible." My correspondent's idea is that a comet (by which he means what we ordinarily distinguish as the head of the comet) is surrounded by a very extensive gaseous atmosphere, and as the comet approaches the sun and begins to shine with a light of its own, this light produces an illuminated streak in the gaseous envelope on the side away from the sun, this streak being the so-called tail, which is necessarily directed away from the sun, just as a dark shadow would be.

Without mentioning many inconsistent details of this theory—and this is not the first time that something of the kind has been proposed as a substitute for the astronmers' explanatin af comets' tails—it may be useful to point out how it fails entirely to agree with the actual appearances presented by a comet.

Either a shadow or a long cone of light proceeding from a luminous body goes in a straight line. Comets' tails are not straight, and often they are very much bent. The sword-shape, or scimetar-shape, which the tail often assumes with great comets is one of the reasons why they have from time immemorial been superstitiously regarded as portents of coming wars.

The typical tail bends backward toward the direction from which the comet moves in its orbit around the sun. The curvature of a comet's tail seems to vary in accord with the weight of the particles constituting the tail. The heavier the particles the shorter and more sharply curved the tail, because the particles are driven off by the pressure of the light of the sun, a force capable of overcoming gravitation when acting upon particles below, say, a hundred-thousandth of an inch in diameter.

Comets' tails present many other appearances inconsistent with any kind of "shadow" theory of their formation. Occasionally a short subsidiary tail points direct to the sun. When studied with telescopes the heads of comets are seen to throw out toward the sun curved envelopes, shaped like concentric caps or shields from whose borders the particles seem to bend round and stream backward to form the tail.

The tails often undergo sudden and wonderful changes of form, brightness and direction. Some comets have several tails, arranged like a fan. Portions separate and drift away. After such an occurrence masses of unusual brightness have been seen to move swiftly up the line of the tail, away from the head. Some comets' tails have been photographed at moments when they seemed to have been distorted, bent, and broken by collision, very much in appearance as if they had been swept against some obstacle lying in their path. A comet passing near a planet sometimes has the character of its tail strikingly altered, probably as an effect of the planet's attraction.

There is a splendid photograph of the brilliant "Comet A" of 1910, which looks like a luminous shaft of water thrown from a powerful fire-engine, rising in the form of a vast hyperbolic curve, while from the under, or concave, side sheets of shining particles seem to be descending like showers of falling drops. In a word, comets' tails themselves reject the suggestion that their formation in any way resembles that of a shadow.

Give a Helping Hand

DO YOU pity yourself to the extent that you think you have not had a square deal in this world—and so you have given up trying?

Do you think that if you ever get on and up where you want to be someone must help you, for you can't help yourself enough?

In fact, you have thought so much about the aid you ought to have and can't get, that you do nothing for yourself as an individual.

You keep saying to yourself that if such and such a one would advance money or prestige in your behalf you might succeed.

If someone would loan you money to put you on your feet you would make a mighty effort and prove yourself worthy.

So you postpone your activities until that Someone becomes enough interested in you to boost you into first place.

Well, you will wait a long time.

The fact that you have not enough stamina to push yourself forward is the biggest factor in your failure, so far.

You have thought yourself into inactivity and then bemoaned the lack of interest in your fate.

Fate does not master unless you let it; but YOU master Fate.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Far and Near

MY loved ones are so far away,
Beyond the cruel sea,
Earth seems less fair and life less gay
So far are they from me.

Sometimes I voice a little prayer:
"God, bring them near again,
So ways I walk may all seem fair,
Though skies be gray with rain"

And, even as I long, I see
Dear, smiling visions rise
In perfect form and clarity
To greet my hungry eyes.

Then earth grows fair, though skies be gray,
And all my griefs depart;
My loved ones who are far away,
Are here, within my heart!

Ye Towne Gossip

by K. C. B.

DEAR K. B. C.: I have a dear friend, named Genevieve, who has been very ill for a long time. She has always admired your writing and she once wrote me a letter, after the manner of your column, with apologies to you. Now, I'm wondering if you can help me bring to her and all who suffer, a reason for consolation and cheer at this season. All her life she has given lavishly of her time and strength to bring happiness to the sick and needy. She is a lovely singer with the sweet pure tones of the lark in the voice of her. Do you think that suffering is a fair compensation for an unselfish life of service to others?

NONA.

DEAR NONA.

WE'LL JUST write a letter.

YOU AND I.

TO GENEVIEVE.

AND TO all those others.

WHO ARE SHUT in.

WHILE THE world outside.

GOES ITS cheerful way.

AND WE'LL say to them.

THAT IT IS our wish.

THAT THE holidays.

BROUGHT to them.

A LITTLE SEASON.

OF FORGETFULNESS.

OF AILS AND ACHES.

AND THAT they found.

THAT SICKROOM doors.

ARE JUST as free.

TO SANTA CLAUS.

AS WERE the chimneys.

OF THEIR youthful days.

AND ALSO.

THAT THEY MAY have found.

THAT THOUGH it is.

THEY ARE shut in.

THAT THOUGHTS of them.

AND LOVE of them.

STILL HOLD their place.

WITHIN THE MINDS.

AND IN THE hearts.

OF ALL their friends.

AND ALSO.

WE WILL wish for them.

THAT THIS New Year.

MAY BRING its meed.

OF BETTER days.

AND RECOMPENSE.

AND WHEN again.

A NEW YEAR comes.

THERE'LL BE no ills.

TO SHUT THEM in.

OF THEIR sick days.

BUT MEMORIES.

OF SWEET friendships.

AND KINDNESSES.

THAT HELPED them bear.

THE ILLS they had.

I THANK you.

Prohibition agents are warning all drinkers against bad whisky. Some of us can remember the time when there was no such thing as bad whisky—some was better than the other, but—that's all.

LISTEN, WORLD! ELSIE ROBINSON Says: The Other Side

"INJURED Innocence—"

There's a heart-moving phrase. We're hearing it often these days. A girl—a boy—a gathering crowd of drink crazed youngsters—heads going dizzy, blood running wild, a night of orgy—disgrace. And then, the next day, the furious outcry. An hysterical girl, screaming accusation—terrified boys before a police judge—an outraged public clamoring for venegeance.

You know the story—or part of it—the part that begins in that sordid room and ends so often, for the boy, behind prison bars. But do you know the other part of the story? There IS another part of the story, and it's time we all faced it.

Let's go back to the beginning of this thing.

Can YOU distinguish a "good girl" from a bad one"?

Easy enough to do that in your father's time. Easy as telling a hyena from a canary! Bad girls smoked and drank. Bad girls used make-up, wore flashy jewelry, bleached their hair, used loud perfume, looked out of the corners of their eyes, spoke to strange men, accepted buggy rides from those men. Crude distinctions, but they safe-guarded respectable womanhood better than sawed-off shot guns. No danger of your dad "plying a girl with liquor." Good girls didn't ply. No danger of your dad taking a good girl into a strange room. Good girls didn't go into strange rooms with men.

And dad knew it.

But now—

Eyes thick with mascara, dark with knowledge at 13. Dates and petting parties at 14. Tongues furred with gin at 16. "Sugar daddies at 18—

NOT ALL OF THEM, THANK GOD, NOR EVEN THE MAJORITY. MOST OF OUR GIRLS ARE AS FINE AND SWEET AS YOUR MOTHER WAS. MOST OF OUR GIRLS ARE GUARDED BY THE UNMISTAKABLE PROTECTION OF THEIR OWN PURITY.

But those others—

Dresses thin as a veil—every curve of the body on tantalizing display—no corsets, no underclothes, skirts above the knees. Indecent data, but it's true. Out every night to parties—sleeping every day until 12 or 1—sponging car fares, meals and drinks off any chance stranger—a dozen 'phone calls every night, man voices asking for Mamie—petting parties—booze—

"Ply them with drink?" Most of them LEAP AT IT! So tired, nerves worn so ragged they must have it to keep going.

WHAT ARE THE MOTHERS DOING WHILE THIS IS GOING ON—THE MOTHERS WHO RAGE SO WHEN THE HARM IS DONE? DON'T THEY SEE THOSE STUMBLING RETURNS AT DAWN—DON'T THEY SMELL THAT GIN-LADEN BREATH OR SUSPECT THOSE 'PHONE CALLS?

Sex. From the time they enter their teens they are using sex with every allure and provocation that was ever known to the most abandoned woman. Teasing—taunting—tempting—And then some night—gin-crazed—sex madened — their "bluff is called"—and the thing happens.

Is that Injured Innocence?

And if so who injured that innocence? The Girl Herself? The Boy? The Mother? Or you and I who permit these things?

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 13.—Thoughts while strolling: A drug store offers chili con carne. Chronic "Must Sell Stock—Lease Expiring" stores. The bridge expert who looks like Harry Thaw. A Gay Ninety touch—a tandem bicycle for sale. More little red dynamite huts. Wonder when New York will get back its streets? Lindy, the cafe man.

Those young West Pointers who seem inclined to shove you off the sidewalk. Delicatessen clerks in blue smocks. The cafe with a huge pile of "prop" hats on the rack—and often empty. Flappers with a Jean Eagles voice and police dogs. A. E. Matthews, the actor. Gloria Swanson is letting her hair grow.

Mumbling hags who fish in refuse cans. Hemstitching parlors with rows of bent backs. A push cart sale of carpet slippers. The shoeless patrons in the waiting room of an electrical mending shop. Those yapping lap dogs in limousines. May Allison and Jim Quirk.

More Spanish restaurants. Speaking for myself, I don't like Spanish food, combs, shawls, guitars or dancing. Nor do I care for King Alfonso's profile. Ziegfeld gazing at his theater from across the street. The veils that come over one eye. And those sporty tweed coats for ladies.

A window dresser standing off to admire a wax dummy. Furniture stores appealing to honeymooners. While-you-wait print shops. Haberdasheries with most of their stock in the windows, that stay open all night. A patrol wagon backs up at a Turkish bath. Foreign magazine shops and quick lunches with radios.

Whatever became of Forty-second street's moving sidewalk? See the Lord's prayer on a pin head—5 cents. Shivering clerks in desolate soft drink stands. Speaking of Harry Thaw—that looks like him coming out of the Belmont. Scuffing red caps in front of Grand Central.

Galloping commuters. The grand carpets spread to Twentieth Century trains. Information bureau clerks who never look at questioners. Faces solemn, gay and indifferent. The bright looking shops below the first level—selling everything from jewelry to fur overcoats.

A new club in an upper Broadway hotel features a bar for gentlemen and a separate bar for ladies. Needless to say it is strictly entrenous and hotsy totsy.

Those of us who waste printer's ink sobbing over beautiful cigaret girls in cafes and cabarets can save the sniveling for worthier causes. In a bankruptcy proceeding it developed a certain merchant kept his business going for several weeks by borrowing earnings of a friendly cigaret girl. She made more than $100 a week.

* * *

Incidentally, the highest salary paid to a female theatrical star this season is said to be $6,000 a week. She isn't worth it. Nobody is.

* * *

The other morning in an apartment house, a knock at the wrong door brought a famous and beautiful ingenue of the stage. She had been aroused from sleep. I could imagine her awakening with a dewey smile to stretch like a fluffy kitten. What I saw through the slit in the door was a frowzy head, a sallow face, lustreless eyes and her voice was raspy.

* * *

The younger gin drinking set has found something new in the flashlight dance. The dance room is darkened and each one of the boy friends carries a pocket flashlight—used chiefly in finding his dance partner. The opportunity for necking is said to be grand.

Yet even this could not provide a greater opportunity for petting than the game of post-office that raged 20 years ago. Except in those days the boys and girls called it "spooning."

New York forgets scandal quickly. In a cafe the other night I saw five men in a distinguished gathering who in the past 20 years have figured in such notoriously disgraceful episodes that two of them were unprintable.

The Microbe of Conceit

By DR. FRANK CRANE

One of the most dangerous microbes flying around in this vale of bacteria is the one that causes "swelled heads."

It has been definitely traced and herein is exposed.

It is COMPARING YOURSELF WITH OTHERS.

When you begin to think:

"Now, look at Herbert. With lots more ability than I have, he hasn't made as much progress in the last 10 years as I have made," you want to cross your fingers. You are on dangerous ground.

The only test of whether or not you are going along as well as you should is whether or not you are coming up to what you are capable of doing.

It has nothing to do with what others do or whether you are moving faster or slower than they are.

In a schoolroom bright pupils and dull pupils are mixed.

Bright ones, doing only half what they should, and are capable of doing, surpass dull ones doing their best.

In Life's schoolroom grown pupils are similarly mixed and each is responsible for doing all he can with the stuff he has.

You can always find someone with whom you compare favorably.

You can always find someone to whom you are inferior.

Even if you are superior to everyone around you, your superiority is largely accidental, arising from the weakness of others.

In other places and other times you would find a host of superiors.

It is an extremely pleasant occupation, this comparing yourself to others to your advantage. But it is a microbe to be swatted.

When you begin to see that you work harder THAN; read more THAN; are more truthful THAN; have a better command of words THAN; someone else, look out.

You may not know it, but imperceptibly the cranium is beginning to bulge.

A saving reflection for the moment is the one that in other places are other people who are working harder, reading more, commanding their words with greater fluency and effect, than are you.

This conceit microbe is as dangerous as a railroad crossing.

When you approach it, BE CAREFUL.

Egotism is a very insidious and harmful quality.

It makes us ridiculous and it makes us unliked. It is about the most anti-social vice we can have.

No pain should be spared not only to clean ourselves of the attitude of egotism, but of egotistic thoughts.

No man should, in the language of the Bible, "Think of himself more highly than he ought to think."

Right Angles

By ALEXANDER CAIRNS

Ashes to Ashes

IT WAS a remarkable threnody without music which Edward Everett Hale sang at the funeral of Oliver Wendell Holmes.

Whether the speaker thought that the deceased was then "A Man Without a Country," or whether he considered death a tunnel instead of a terminus, we are left to imagine.

But Hale commended the unitarian creed of the deceased and intimated that it would make excellent spiritual pabulum for any "Autocrat of the Breakfast Table" of spiritual food.

And the elegist called the roll of several Alpine peaks who had been dining daily at the same theological table—Lowell, Ripley, George William Curtis, Longfellow, Margaret Fuller, Emerson and Whittier, the Quaker poet.

Some wit remarked that if the orators of old—Cicero, Demosthenes, Mark Antony—could hear the modern high school students repeating their speeches, they'd be sorry they spoke.

Anyway high school oratory might soon shuffle off its mortal coil if deprived of that elegiac immortality:

"Friends, Romans, countrymen, lend me your ears;
I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him."

And I suppose it would go without challenge among the well-read that Robert Ingersoll's eulogy at the grave of his brother is to prose what Gray's Elegy is to verse.

Here is the deduction—that literature being but the echo and expression of life, it follows that the mystery of death, looming large in literature, looms large in the thought of mankind.

And every passing decade carries with it into oblivion a deal of the theological nightmare that made the death room a chamber of horrors. And the fear that used to be an eternal torment for millions of children has given way to childhood thoughts which look like pansies and asphodels.

People no longer begrudge Paradise to the unitarians in the oration of Hale, nor to the lamented Caesar, nor to the brother of Ingersoll, nor to any other great and beautiful soul.

God is good and the sable cloud of death has an amethystine lining.
